

Plot Final Fantasy VII Remake - Part 3: It was time Shinra wanted to fall

Different from the comfortable blast of the # 1 furnace that Shinra intentionally opened and closed with his eyes closed, this time Avalanche and Cloud picked up all sorts of different troubles.

Different from the comfortable blast of the # 1 furnace that Shinra intentionally opened and closed with his eyes closed, this time Avalanche and Cloud picked up all sorts of different troubles.

Chapter 6: Light the Way

After taking the elevator to the bottom, the group finds this place as a maze with Section E, F, G, H intersecting intertwinedly by Sector 4. Barret is unable to help when all day long. talk about his unrealistic plans and the monsters sneak in every dark corner waiting for their victims to get lost. After a few turns, observing the overall map of the area, the team concluded that to reach the No. 5 Mako reactor, they needed to pass through Section H but to clear the customs, they could find a transport elevator because there was no Any direct route to go through this area. Running around for another 2000 years along with many clashes along the way when they were asked by the monsters for their health. Without bothering to search, Cloud has discovered the central elevator control panel to enter. Unfortunately, the current power source is not enough for it to operate because Shinra prioritizes energy for lighting, so Barret and Tifa offer to cut off the energy of the giant super giant solar lights to run the elevator.

Of course, when the fixed light sources disappeared, unless Shinra were the underdogs, they would quickly detect this dark area and send in more and more soldiers to search. As expected, when the first solar light was cut off, immediately the defense system in the area was reactivated, from which point they would have to be more careful because the automatic machine gun turrets would disappear. Kill anyone who enters their range of attack. By the time the group reaches the pipeline leading to the Mako 5 reactor, Cloud almost takes Biggs' head off when he finds him lurking behind the wall. Biggs said the area above was rioting into a convoy upon hearing the news that the Avalanche terrorists (Cloud's group) jumped the train to escape Shinra's pursuit, and the area around the reactor became extremely quiet. static. Before I left, Biggs provided the team members with grappling guns to use when needed.

Chapter 7: A Trap is Sprung

It was time for the play to be finished, when Cloud and the other members of Avalanche reached the center of the reactor and prepared to place the bomb, the chairman of Shinra and the captain Heidegger were also hurrying to prepare the necessary things. to 'greet' them. However, Cloud is seen starting to have a headache and puzzling images (with new players) like Tifa wearing a cowboy outfit crying bitterly over his father's body. The little girl also screamed that she hated Sephiroth, SOLDIER, Mako and Shinra and then carried a giant katana to find someone to fight. Returning to the current image, after placing the Jessie-built bomb in the reactor, the group wanted to withdraw but were stopped by the drones and holographic projection technology. Now they know they've been long watched by the Shinra, even this group has ample time to cut CCTV to edit into a short news.

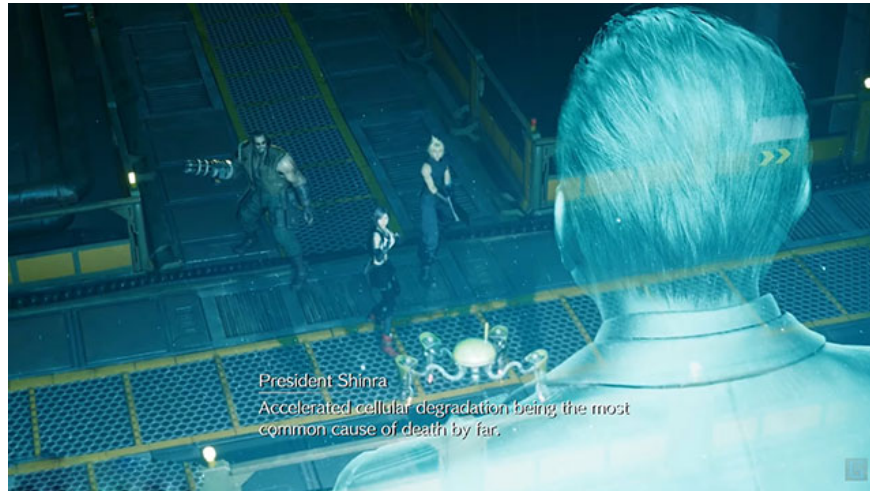

Plot Final Fantasy VII Remake - Part 2: Avalanche and the Mako Reactor No.5

Accepting to help Jessie, Cloud is at the Sector 7 station but it is a bit of a hassle when Shinra changes the train schedule.

From the reaction of the people living around the area of ??the No.5 reactor, it can be seen that the purpose of this evil corporation was achieved when the Avalanche fighters fought for the environment considered by villagers. Terrorists like to create panic atmosphere by bombing everywhere. Not yet bitter because the noble ideal was trampled, Barret and Tifa were also shocked by the arrival of The Airbuster, an extremely terrorist fighting machine famous for its destructive power. Heidegger's followers certainly did not disappoint people when they continued to make their command pits, when he was in the middle of the endless manipulation of the machine, they realized that The Airbuster was only 60% assembled. During the process of moving up the upper floors to find a way out, the group discovered the incomplete assembly line of The Airbuster, so it was easy to destroy it.

Upon exiting the outer area, this time Cloud and the others were able to talk to Shinra's president, of course, through holographic projection technology. The chairman revealed to Tifa and Barret why Cloud's eye color looked so strange. It turns out that the soldiers of SOLDIER have been strengthening their cells through injection of Mako extract into the body. This enhancement gives them the terrible power that ordinary soldiers could hardly reach if only through normal training. Of course, the cost of the iris becomes abnormal and the longevity of the SOLDIER team members is often not high, as a result of forcing the accelerated cell to grow. After the sublimation phase of the body when strength and speed are enhanced, The cells begin to degrade quickly and the SOLDIER always have the same end result. Tifa is surprised that Cloud has never mentioned this to her.

At this time, Barret cut off the story of President Shinra's SOLDIER when he started to turn on the ethical explanation for the environment, but the rich man just laughed and then retorted that every resident living in Midgar more or less knows Mako extract from the Lifestream is a serious threat to the ecosystem. But then what, they all pretended to be deaf and dumb or pretended it had nothing to do with them and continued to use the utility from the sources of energy that Shinra brought through the reactors. Between personal interests and the ideal of environmental protection, it is clear that the Midgar residents have a choice to trade, and the work of Avalanche looks beautiful but actually extremely childish because even the part tops can not solve it, let alone the roots. It is unclear what the chairman is hiding, but at the end of the conversation, he unexpectedly says Alavanche has an alliance with Wutai and thanks them for inciting the people to help Shinra.

The screen returns to Heidegger and the bombs that Cloud's group set to sabotage The Airbuster are being disabled by the drones. Even the bomb they placed in the 5th Mako Reactor was taken away by Shinra and the others. At this time, The Airbuster is also transported by helicopter to Cloud's group and an extremely tired battle is about to take place. Upon being defeated, The Airbuster explodes, causing the middle of the iron bridge to collapse and Cloud is trapped there. Under the overwhelming firepower of the drones surrounding the spiky youth, he could only tell Barret to bring TifaGo to safety then let go to let yourself fall to the bottom. Thanks to the shotgun that Biggs had previously given him to slow down the 'landing' speed, but eventually the rope still broke because of the weight they could not bear, Cloud gradually fell into a coma before being swallowed by endless darkness. hunched.

(Continue)

This is an article in a series of Final Fantasy VII Remake Plots

You finished reading the article "Plot Final Fantasy VII Remake - Part 3: It was time Shinra wanted to fall" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

