

Poco F2 Pro will be one of the cheapest high-end smartphones in 2020

A lot of information about the Poco F2 Pro has been uncovered as it is expected to be a rebranded Redmi K30 Pro to be the flagship Snapdragon 865 phone.

According to the Android Authority, based on the latest leaks, the Poco F2 Pro will become one of the most affordable top-end phones currently available, priced at only $ 615 in Europe for the internal storage version. 128 GB.

This is a lot lower than the $ 711 for the 128 GB version and 820 USD for the previous 256 GB version. However, these leaked rates are reported to Portugal, where phones are often more expensive than the rest of Europe.

The new leaks also give us information about the colors on the Poco F2 Pro, including: white, purple, gray and blue just like with the Redmi K30 Pro that was previously launched in China.

Considering the price of the upcoming phone from Poco, the product could be one of the most affordable high-end phones available. It's much cheaper than Xiaomi's Mi 10, which starts at $ 878 in Europe, but is more expensive than the recently launched Realme X50 Pro 5G in Europe priced at $ 647.

Compared to other high-end phones like the Galaxy S20 series, the forthcoming Poco phone may be the most expensive option available. The product will be officially launched on this 12.5.

You finished reading the article "Poco F2 Pro will be one of the cheapest high-end smartphones in 2020" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.