How to complete the Musical Memory puzzle in Poppy Playtime Chapter 2

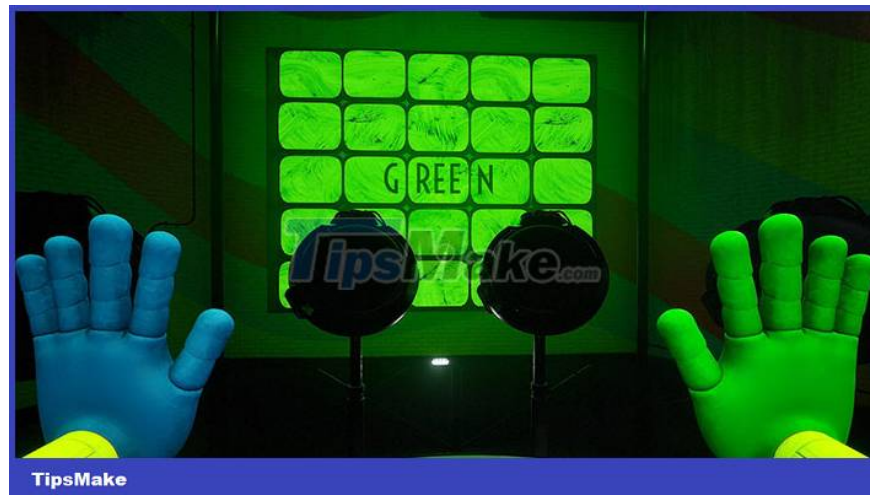

The player will unlock Musical Memory as soon as they get the green GrabPack hand, which allows electricity to be transferred to certain places for a short period of time.

Upon entering the Musical Memory room, everyone receives a brief tutorial on how the game works. Gamers will need to match the colors displayed on the screen and hit them in the correct order.

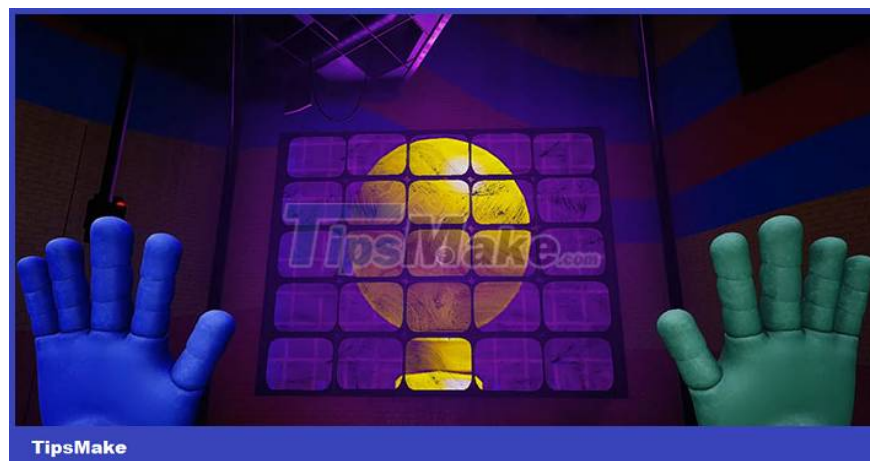

This challenge is a traditional memory puzzle. Colors will appear on the screen and everyone has to click the icons in the same sequence. When you pass a game, new buttons will appear.

When the sequence is completed correctly, the Bunzo toy at the top will be pulled up and further away from everyone. If the sequence is wrong, Bunzo will go down closer and faster. If the player lets Bunzo touch him, the test ends and the player loses.

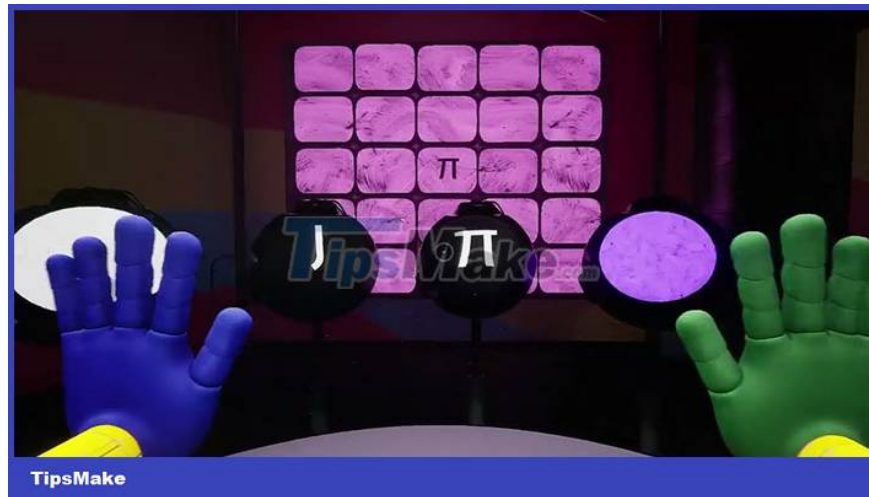

The game follows a strict pattern. As the testing process continues, everyone will need to react faster to hit all the colors, making sure to keep them in the correct order. The game is divided into several rounds, each subsequent round requires the player to act faster.

The sequences will be different for each player, so don't expect the same colors to work for everyone. The 5th button will appear in the second round and everyone will need to press that button to complete the color set.

For the third round, 2 more buttons will appear, making a total of 7 buttons that the player will have to press.

The fourth round adds the letters and the term 'pi' to the mix, making it all the more difficult to complete.

The fifth round adds upper buttons that the player must press while completing the sequence. However, people will need to press the rotary button with the triangle and exclamation mark in the middle to damage the machine.
