

Remember 9 things you should limit sharing on social networks

There are many dangers hidden behind social media status lines. Take note of the following for the protection of you and your loved one ...

Facebook is the largest social network in the world today. In fact, if Facebook users are careless, they can face child kidnapping, disseminating information and depraved publications, stealing personal information . Being aware of dangers, setting steps Protect yourself and those around you are extremely necessary. Here are the things we should refrain from posting on social media:

1. Pictures of the children:

You need to think carefully before posting pictures of your children on social networks, whether it's pictures of your children or other children. First, children are too young to decide whether their images should be published on social media.

Second, even people you never expected to be kidnappers, posting pictures of children will somehow evoke misleading thinking patterns from people with greed. not good. At some point, each parent has a different opinion about sharing their child's pictures on social networks.

The safest way that parents can refer to is to post pictures of their children in a family chat group, so that everyone in the family can grasp the information while ensuring that personal information is secure. safety.

Picture 1 of Remember 9 things you should limit sharing on social networks

2. Where your child learns:

We should not be too subjective but think that schools are safe places for children, the fact that there have been so many kidnappings at schools - out of the control of parents and teachers. If you want to share pictures of your children in class, make sure your child's school and classroom names are hidden.

3. Photos of drunkenness:

Social media today is a place where employers and superiors can view and find out information about their employees. Think about if your profile is filled with a drunken image and bad words, it will be extremely detrimental to job search and affect your promotion later, so Please consider carefully about your own image.

4. People you don't know:

For some, Facebook is a place where you can get to know as many strangers as possible compared to keeping in touch with people you really know who they are. The danger of this is that you never know who the person behind that Facebook account really is. Accepting your friends at random can put you in danger.

5. Your phone number:

In the age of information technology, your phone number is quite possibly a type of information that is very beneficial for the bad guys. When you have your phone number information, imposters will easily use them for their personal purposes. The fact that you are disturbed because of the advertising information also comes out.

6. Birthday:

It's great to make birthdays public and on that day you can receive hundreds of best wishes from relatives and friends. However, it is easier than ever to steal your personal information to make it public. Be careful!

7. Your current location:

When you let others know where you are, inadvertently hinting at the bad guy that your home is vacant, and intruders can easily grasp whether you are at home or not.

8. Your vacation plan:

You're so excited that you finally got a ticket for your next great vacation and rushed to post it on social media without even thinking that your information will be leaked and made to the public. Bad stuff up a perfect plan for breaking into your house.

9. Bank credit cards:

If you use an online payment account to pay for Facebook ads, make sure you delete all of your card information once the job is done. Your information will be easily stolen, so make sure you do not leave any information about your personal bank account.

Above are information about Remember 9 things you should limit sharing on social networks. Thank you for watching and see you in the following articles. You can see the article "Tips to Keep Your Phone Safe from Online Threats" to learn how to keep your phone safe while online on the internet. Good luck

You finished reading the article "Remember 9 things you should limit sharing on social networks" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.