

Remote system management with the new Microsoft Intune application for Android

In January, Microsoft officially announced plans to deploy support for Android devices fully managed through the Intune service.

In January, Microsoft officially announced plans to deploy support for fully managed Android devices via Intune service and today April 20, ie after about 3 months, the app version This useful use of Microsoft for Android has begun to allow IT managers to deploy work from their Android handsets. Accordingly, the current Intune application will provide IT technical support staff with access to their organizational resources while still protecting them against potential security risks.

1. Users are about to be allowed to edit Microsoft Word, Excel and PowerPoint files in Google Docs

As you know, you used to be able to manage other devices from your PC before, while with help from Intune, you can now operate the app manually via your Android device. me

Overall, this application provides the following features:

1. Configure access to organizational resources.
2. Device management and device access.
3. Get support in case of need.

You can find the Intune application in the Google Play store through this link.

1. Microsoft admits hackers may have read Outlook email and warned users to change their passwords

You finished reading the article "Remote system management with the new Microsoft Intune application for Android" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.