

Rules of Survival announced to officially close this June

Once one of the most popular battle royale games on the mobile platform, Rules of Survival can no longer compete with other competitors.

According to the latest announcement from Rules of Survival, this game will officially close and stop working on June 27. This also means that all data of this game will also be completely deleted from this date.

As one of the first mobile battle royale games, Rules of Survival was once a very famous name with a huge number of players around the globe. However, Rules of Survival did not make any improvements and was quickly defeated by later super products like PUBG Mobile or Call of Duty Mobile. That's why the number of players of Rules of Survival has dropped sharply in a short time.

Dear Player:

Thank you for your continuous support and love towards Rules of Survival.

We regret to inform you that Rules of Survival will cease operations on June 27, 2022 at 15:00:00 (UTC+8). After that, players will no longer be able to access Rules of Survival game servers, and all account data and character info (including but not limited to characters, Diamonds, items, materials) will be deleted.

You can apply for a refund for unused Diamonds on the corresponding platform from 06/28/2022 10:00:00 - 09/28/2022 18:00:00 (UTC+8).

We sincerely apologize for this and thank you once again for your tremendous support towards Rules of Survival.

To save the situation, Rules of Survival has also released version 2.0 with many significant updates to the gameplay, sound and visuals. However, the excessive number of bugs in the game has made more and more gamers move away from Rules of Survival.

For gamers who still have unused diamonds in the game, they can get a refund through the support department between June 28 and September 28. The closure of Rules of Survival is a pity for the gaming community after more than 5 years of being released, but this is a necessity for newer games to be released.
