

Rumors of OnePlus and HTC Volantis tablets are fake

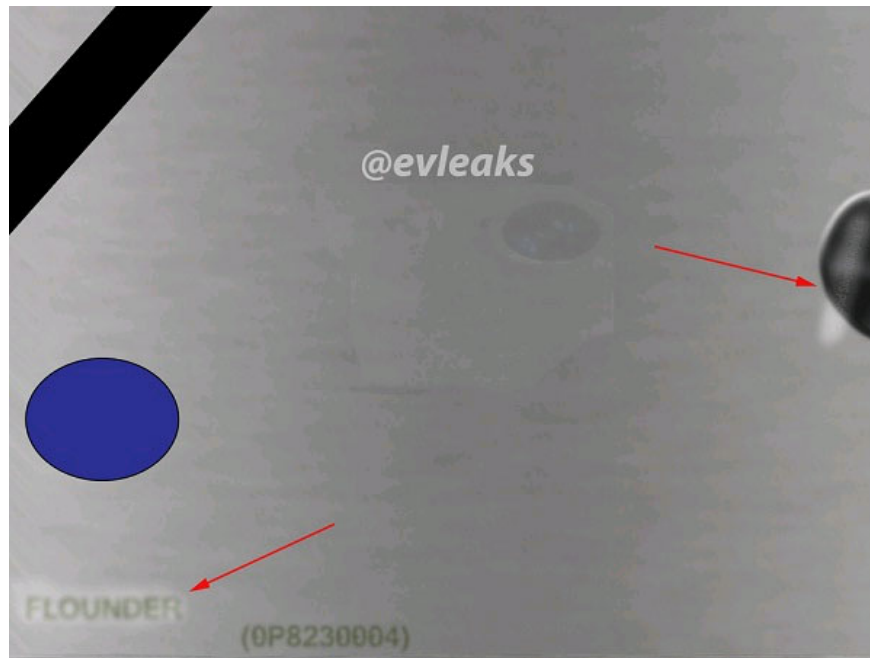

The source of evleaks, which is usually quite accurate, has denied the rumors of two devices posted by him on his personal page recently. Accordingly, HTC does not have any device called Volantis, and OnePlus does not plan to develop the OnePlus Tab tablet.

The source of evleaks, which is usually quite accurate, has denied the rumors of two devices posted by him on his personal page recently. Accordingly, HTC does not have any device called Volantis, and OnePlus does not plan to develop the OnePlus Tab tablet.

Previously, OnePlus was supposed to be preparing to introduce a tablet called OnePlus Tab to accompany the OnePlus One smartphone. This information is posted along with the screenshot of its website. However, soon after OnePlus company contacted evleaks and confirmed that the photo was photoshop, and the company did not plan to produce a tablet.

The next victim of the fake game is HTC Volantis, which is considered the next Nexus device to be launched by Google. The specs of the device are very terrible, equipped with 64-bit NVIDIA K1 processor, 5GB RAM and 8.9 inch screen with a resolution of 2560 x 1600 pixels. It turned out that this was just a product of the imagination of a 14-year-old boy pretending to be a Google employee.

This is one of the reasons why technology is always cautious when it comes to some unofficial source.

You finished reading the article "Rumors of OnePlus and HTC Volantis tablets are fake" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.