

Samsung Galaxy Tab 2 10.1 is the worst tablet of 2012

Recently, the famous mobile phone site, PhoneArena, has scored the 'worst of the year' tablets.

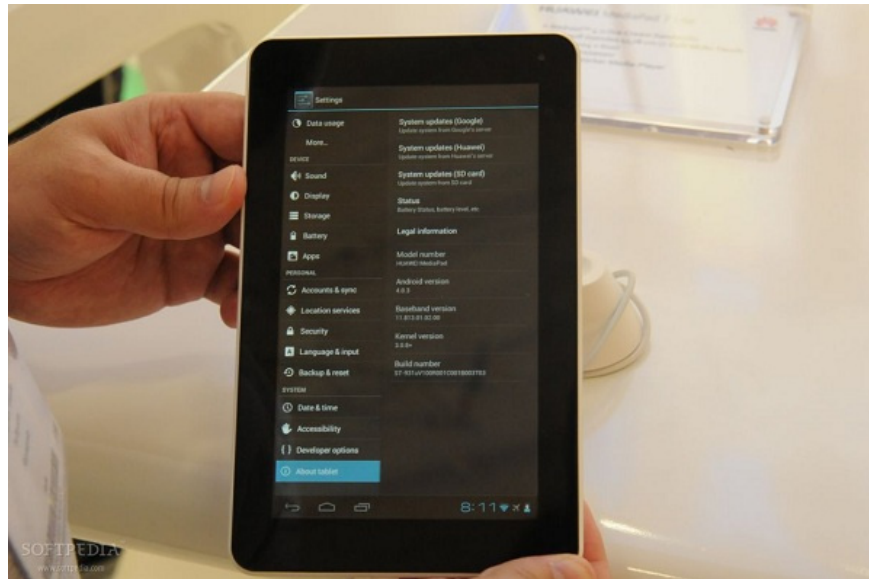

Recently, the famous mobile phone site, PhoneArena, has scored the "worst of the year" tablets. It was a surprise that Samsung's Galaxy Tab 2 10.1, a heavily advertised product, also appeared on this list. There must be many people wondering why this is happening?

More specifically, the reason that Samsung Galaxy Tab 2 10.1 is included in the list of "worst of the year" is: this tablet caused great disappointment for users. People have been looking forward to a striking new step worthy of the success of the original Galaxy Tab 10.1, but they all fell back when this successor came out.

Those who own the Galaxy Tab 10.1 have absolutely no reason to upgrade to version 2. With a price of up to $ 450, the Galaxy Tab 2 10.1 doesn't have any noticeable changes. Samsung is showing a lack of ideas as well as being cautious when putting such a bad Android product on the market.

Playing Samsung Galaxy Tab 2 10.1 in the list of the worst tablets MediaPad 7 Lite comes from Chinese manufacturer Huawei. In fact, this product is not too bad, even very convenient with a compact design that can fit in the pocket while also having the ability to call and surf the web with 3G connection.

However, with the money to buy Huawei MediaPad 7 Lite one-core chip configuration, you have a lot of other better options: the 3G-free version of the tablet from reputable brands. Unless you feel the 3G connection is indispensable, if not, skip this product immediately and switch to select other devices with brand Samsung, HTC, LG, Nexus, Sony .
