

Samsung sends user warning before releasing One UI 7

Samsung has just issued a warning to users participating in the One UI 7 Beta program about the official update.

Samsung emphasizes that as the official release of One UI 7 approaches, users need to upgrade to the latest Beta version of One UI 7 to ensure a smooth transition to the stable version.

One UI 7 is getting closer to older Galaxy users.

Galaxy S24 users have now received One UI 7 Beta 4. Users need to make sure their devices are running this version to avoid issues while updating to the official One UI 7.

According to Samsung, using the latest release will help users avoid complicated operations such as manually flashing the official firmware via PC, which can result in erasing all data on the device.

Samsung recommends that users update to the One UI 7 release before leaving the Beta program. If users leave the Beta program without updating, they may not receive the stable version the usual way and will need to go through complicated steps to restore their device data.

01-07-2025 11:45 AM ·question

Hello. This is the beta operation manager.

It has been confirmed that you have withdrawn from the beta program.

We have taken steps to re-enroll in the beta program so that you can update to the official version.

Please update to the latest version through "Settings > Software Update."

If you leave the beta program before updating to the official version,

Please note that updates will not be possible, so please keep this in mind when participating in the next beta program.

Warning content from Samsung.

Adjusting the One UI 7 Beta program can be done through the Members app on Samsung phones.

You finished reading the article "Samsung sends user warning before releasing One UI 7" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.