

Samsung Tab A 2020: Support 4G, 10-hour battery

The new Galaxy Tab A with many useful features and attractive prices, promises to create a 'balance of competition' competition with the iPad Mini models and the Apple-branded segment.

Without a doubt, Apple is the dominant player in the global tablet market with the superior sales of iPad models from the mid-range to high-end segments. However, not so that Android manufacturers 'frustrated'. Recently, Samsung has officially launched the mid-range Galaxy Tab A tablet with many useful features and attractive prices, promising to create a 'competition of balance' with the iPad Mini models of the same segment. segment with the brand Apple Khuy Khuy.

The advantage of this new mini tablet lies in its compact design, the frame is made from 'solid metal with high-quality finishing', supports mobile connectivity (4G LTE), battery life up to 10 hours, with relatively strong hardware configuration.

In fact, it is relatively rare for tablet models in the mid-to-intermediate segment to be equipped with mobile connectivity support. The fact that Galaxy Tab A 2020 possesses this ability helps the product to have a great competitive advantage in the market.

In terms of hardware configuration, this tablet is equipped with Exynos processor clocked at 1.8 GHz, 3GB RAM and 32GB of internal memory (can support scalability via microSD card slot). 8.4 inch screen FullHD resolution of 1920x1200 16:10 with 5,000mAh battery promises to meet the entertainment needs and basic work of users.

One advantage that should be mentioned on the Galaxy Tab A 2020 in particular and Samsung's tablet models in general is the Samsung Kids + service, which allows parents to better control the use of children's devices, and also brings many useful learning support features. Samsung is currently free of the Samsung Kids + service pack for Galaxy Tab tablet users for the first 30 days, and the cost for the second month is just $ 0.49. After that, the service fee will be fixed at $ 7.99 a month.

The Samsung Galaxy Tab A 2020 has started shipping worldwide for $ 279.99.
