

Samsung The Terrace: Water-resistant, dust-proof outdoor TV, 4K resolution

Samsung has just officially launched The Terrace, a specialized 4K QLED outdoor TV line with a soundbar that promises to bring new breeze to the relatively bleak smart TV market.

Samsung has just officially launched The Terrace, a specialized 4K QLED outdoor TV line with a soundbar that promises to bring new breeze to the relatively bleak smart TV market.

The Terrace will be available in 3 sizes: 55, 65 and 75 inches, depending on the needs of the user. As announced by the Korean manufacturer, this TV model is designed to fit perfectly into the outdoor space. Rain, wind, dust, sunshine . all are not unhappy with The Terrace.

The Samsung TV is equipped with IP55 dust and water resistance, with a screen brightness of up to 2,000 nits, allowing images to always be clearly displayed even in direct sunlight. In addition, the overall design of the product still ensures the elegance and modernity with ultra-thin borders, in harmony with all outdoor spaces.

Samsung The Terrace

In terms of support features, The Terrace still contains the advantages that make up Samsung brand. The Samsung Tizen operating system has been perfectly optimized for smart TVs. User support features include Samsung TV Plus and Samsung Health. Along with that are the viewing features on mobile devices such as Multi View and Tap View. Integrating the most popular virtual assistants today such as Bixby, Amazon Alexa and Google Assistant.

In terms of display quality, there's almost no point to criticize on The Terrace models. All 3 models are equipped with QLED panels with a resolution of 3,840 x 2,160 pixels that meet 4K UHD standard. In particular, the outermost screen will be covered with a transparent crystal layer, which minimizes light reflection, this factor combined with brightness up to 2,000 nits ensures the screen can still be Display brilliant images with accurate color contrast even under bright sunlight. In addition, this monitor also owns a refresh rate of up to 240fps, ensuring smooth visibility for fast-paced content such as action movies, sports and even gaming.

Commenting on the new products, Jonghee Han, President of Visual Display Business at Samsung Electronics, said:

'Today, new modern habits, trends and lifestyles, in harmony with nature, are changing faster than ever. People use the screen to work and play at home, stay in touch with loved ones and take part in many other activities. Therefore, TVs should also be developed and modified to better suit those needs. With the launch of The Terrace, we are pleased to bring you a whole new experience, a unique combination of technology and nature, created from the feats of engineering and experience. content that only Samsung can achieve. '

Complementing the TV models The Terrace is a soundbar that significantly improves sound quality, especially in open, outdoor spaces. Comes with the most popular connection technologies today: Wi-fi and bluetooth, supporting the ability to play multi-device wireless music. The soundbar is also equipped with a different standard than IP55 water and dust and can be attached directly to TV Terrace.

Soundbar Terrace

TV Terrace is now available online in the US and Canada, starting at $ 4,999.99 for the 65-inch model. The soundbar retails for $ 1,199.99.

You finished reading the article "Samsung The Terrace: Water-resistant, dust-proof outdoor TV, 4K resolution" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.