

Samsung's new fridge model can set your diet with AI technology

Artificial intelligence (AI) technology is having an increasingly profound impact on every aspect of human life, especially in improving comfort and quality of life.

Artificial intelligence (AI) technology is having an increasingly profound impact on every aspect of human life, especially in improving comfort and quality of life. If mood baths, self-contained garbage bins or smart rice cookers haven't surprised you yet, this Samsung AI fridge is sure to surprise you. the evolution of technology - it can set a scientific diet for you through AI.

Specifically, this smart refrigerator model, called Family Hub (2nd generation), is expected to be introduced by Samsung at CES 2020, highlighting a series of new AI features, as well as improvements to the features. Power available.

Drill down into new features. Family Hub Version 2 will be equipped with an AI camera system, which can scan images inside the refrigerator, analyze and report you the status of and any changes in food. With the new and improved Meal Planner feature, the refrigerator can now create its own grocery shopping list. Based on the status and list of existing food, the Quick Plan feature will be able to recommend you the best recipes for up to 1 week, helping to reduce food waste as well as save money. .

Not only that, Family Hub 2 also allows you to design your own delicious and healthier meals, as well as customize recipes based on your preferences, dietary needs and fridge items. .

In addition, the ability to interact with the virtual assistant Bixby has also been significantly improved, allowing users to use Family Hub smarter, touch-free operation, and have a more personalized experience. The new Bixby also offers a variety of services that allow homeowners to control and monitor devices and IoT services at home with voice commands.

The pricing for Family Hub 2 has not been disclosed.

You finished reading the article "Samsung's new fridge model can set your diet with AI technology" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.