Huawei Mate 10, the flagship phone from the world's second largest mobile phone manufacturer, will officially launch on October 16.

Thanks to Evan Blass's 'holy leak' information, we learned the appearance of the most powerful phone in Huawei's next generation, the Huawei Mate 10 Pro.

Huawei Mate 10 Pro has a big difference with the Huawei before all have the top and bottom bezel, while it has almost no bezel with a design that reminds us of Samsung's Note 8 or LG V30.

In the back, the dual-camera camera is a feature of "nailing" on high-end Huawei phones for a while, placed along and in the middle of the phone, right on the fingerprint sensor.

The lens is set in a lighter color band than other parts of the phone, making Huawei Mate 10 look quite unique. A photo of the phone camera shared by Blass shows that this is also a Leica product, with an impressive Summilux lens and aperture of $f / 1.6$, the same aperture with the rear camera of LG V30.

There are no technical details yet, but from previous rumors we know quite well. Mate 10 will have 3 versions: the version is usually called Mate 10, Lite and Pro version. Blass said that the Pro version will have Huawei's Kirin 970 chipset, 6GB of RAM, 64 / 128GB memory, an LCD screen of 1880 x 1440 5.99 and a 4000mAh battery. The rear camera will be a 12/20 megapixel combo, and the front selfie camera will be 8 megapixels.

The phone will use Leica camera

If you look closely at the shared Blass image, you will see the AI icon on the phone screen. Huawei also advertised Kirin 970's AI capabilities, with AI chips (Huawei called Neural Processing Unit - NPU). They also tease the AI of iPhone 8 and iPhone X in a short video introducing Huawei Mate 10.

After some boring designs, Huawei seems to be preparing some interesting things. The Mate 10 Pro will be a very powerful phone. The 18: 9 screen will also be as modern as the other big screen Android flagship, the back stripe design and some strange color options will definitely make it stand out in the crowd.

We will have more detailed information about Huawei Mate 10 Pro on October 16.
