

See traditional wedding dresses of countries around the world

Let's TipsMake.com around the world to discover the most beautiful traditional wedding dresses of each region in the world in the article below!

In addition to its own cultural characteristics, traditional wedding costumes have also become one of the symbols bearing the national identity of each nation. Thanks to Queen Victoria - the first woman wearing a white wedding dress during the wedding, the classic wedding dresses have become popular since the 19th century. In the past, women would choose a traditional dress, a dress or a fashion suit that day to wear on the wedding day.

In the present time, it is rare to find a wedding dress that is not white. However, in some cultures, especially Asia and Africa, young couples still prefer to wear more traditional wedding dresses. On the Bright Side page, we collected photos of bride and groom in traditional wedding dresses in their country. Do they look great?

Japan

On the big day of life, Japanese brides often wear one or two white or red outfits during the wedding ceremony and the groom wears black kimono with a crest and slacks.

Ghana

Traditional Ghanaian wedding is like a colorful party. Wedding dresses in their countries are designed with different colors and patterns. Every family has its own fabric pattern.

Romanian

Although not a big country, each region in Romania has different traditional wedding costumes. The traditional wedding dress of Romania is a hand-embroidered dress with brocade motifs, the bride is also wearing a simple flower leaf ring but looks very elegant and delicate.

Sami, Northern Europe

The Sami people are indigenous people living in Lapland. Their traditional attire may reveal to you a lot about the person who is wearing it. For example, square buttons mean that person is married, while singles will wear belts with round buttons.

Sri Lanka

In traditional weddings in Sri Lanka, not the bride but the groom is the one who gets the most attention. The groom in the traditional wedding dress is extremely radiant and stands out in red tones with eye-catching decorative motifs, along with a patterned hat and similar colors to the outerwear. And the bride will wear silk sari, wear odd-numbered jewelry because according to this country's concept, odd numbers represent luck, peace and happiness.

India

Sari - a 4-9m long scarf wrapped around the bride is a traditional Indian wedding dress. Indians often choose Sari with red or pink color to symbolize the luck and happiness of the bride and groom. Depending on the house-to-house situation, the wedding dress will be attached with little or more jewels and gems to the extravagant dress, expressing the bride's house. Accompanying the dress is a 16-piece jewelry set called " Solah shrinngar ". In North India, married women are distinguished by a red " Bindi " in the middle of the forehead.

Scotland

Dubbed the " country of men wearing skirts ", on the great day of life, the groom will wear the family's traditional wedding dress with a plaid skirt and shirt and vest. . There is no specific specification of the checkered pattern, depending on the families in the country, because each different family will have separate patterns. After the wedding ceremony, the bride will wear a shawl with a pattern like the bride's " dress " to prove that she has become a part of the family.

Pakistan

Although Pakistan is a Muslim country, their traditional wedding attire has many similarities with India. On the wedding day, the bride will be drawing henna in her hand and wearing a red wedding dress.

Ethiopia

This may surprise many people, but Ethiopia is the only country in Africa, where Christianity is the official religion. The majority of Ethiopian Orthodox Christians. That is why the wedding here is similar to the wedding of the Greeks or Russians.

Indonesia

As a country owning thousands of islands with 300 ethnic groups and 6 major religions, Indonesia has extremely diverse culture and civilization. For that reason, traditional Indonesian weddings are different. In this great holiday, the bride and groom often wear gold crowns.

Causasus

Traditional Causasus wedding dresses are epic with elegant, elegant white colors. The groom usually wears a Caucasian shirt and attaches a sword to his belt, and the bride always chooses for herself a white lace wedding dress.

China

Chinese people believe that red is the color of luck and happiness, as well as chasing evil spirits and demons so their traditional wedding costumes are red. However, not only is each wedding set red, but the red color is always everywhere. After the wedding is over, the groom will remove the red veil on the bride's head.

Hawaii

In the traditional Hawaiian wedding, the groom usually wears white clothes, while the bride adorns her hair with fresh flowers. Looks light but no less romantic right?

Malaysia

In Malaysia, most weddings are organized according to Islamic tradition. Brides often choose a wedding dress with purple or cream color.

Yemeni Jew

Most of the Jewish community has no special costumes dedicated to the wedding. However, Yemeni Jews are an exception. During the wedding, the girls here often wear a very special outfit, inherited from their ancestors.

South Korea

Traditional Korean costumes are called Hanbok and brides often choose it to wear in traditional weddings. In the ancient tradition here, the groom should carry his wife on his back to walk around the table to show that the bride can rely on her husband for a lifetime.

Norway

In Norway, people often wear Bunad - a traditional Norwegian outfit for special occasions like weddings and baptism.

Bali

Balinese weddings will definitely make you feel surprised with their richness and splendor. Their traditional wedding costumes include a lot of complicated details. Moreover, during the ceremony both the groom and the bride often wear gold crowns on their heads.

Nigeria

Nigeria is a large country with more than 250 ethnic groups and 500 languages. As a result, marriage customs in Nigeria vary widely across regions, depending on geography, religion, and ethnicity. However, Nigerian brides often wear light colored clothes and wrap Gele towels on their heads.

Refer to some more articles:

1. 21 beautiful photos you should see right away
2. 5 interesting things about the Japanese education system make the whole world jealous
3. 10 things you probably won't guess their purpose

Having fun!

You finished reading the article "See traditional wedding dresses of countries around the world" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

---