1. Whoever expected the creature to be 10cm long and only known on this table could change the world
2. 3 creatures still "resilient" survive after being eaten

The sight of Powelliphanta's snail prey is revealed by BBC Earth's Wild New Zealand program.

Powelliphanta is a terrestrial carnivorous snail family found only in New Zealand, they are diverse in size, some species can grow to several centimeters, and are likened to sumo wrestling in the snail world.

The big Powelliphanta snails hid quite well, so it was difficult to find them in New Zealand's jungles and meadows. They just rise to the ground when the air becomes saturated and the temperature is at the right level. Therefore, we can only record Powelliphanta snails in captivity.

In the video, the snail gently and gently glides across the wet vegetation in the dark. Although its movement seems slow, the moment snails kill prey, it only happens in the blink of an eye. At an unexpected speed, the snail sucked into the mouth, folding its prey to swallow it all.

So far, this snail's way of finding food is still a mystery. But what is certain is that they have an unusual taste and are very voracious.
