

'Sister Google' has just been updated to a more natural new voice, invited to listen

Recently, Google has updated the voice more naturally to Google sister. This voice can even be based on punctuation to accentuate a voice that matches the question, a double sentence, a single sentence ...

'Google Sister' is a name used by Vietnamese people to call Google's text-to-speech tool by a funny and funny voice.

Recently, Google has updated the new voice more naturally to "Google sister". This voice can even be based on punctuation to accentuate a voice that matches the question, a double sentence, a single sentence .

Invite you to experience the new voice of Google sister here.

In the sentence " Hello, I'm Google sister. Hello!" , Google Translate pronounced with intonation, the first word "friend" is lighter, more compact than the second "you", making the sentence easier to hear. Voice is much more natural than before.

Google Translate or Google Translate is Google's first online translation tool introduced in 2006. When it first launches, the tool will translate text into English before continuing to translate into the target language rather than translate. direct.

In order to produce the most popular results, Google uses millions of documents to compare during translation.

In 2016, thanks to the application of neural simulation machine technology, Google Translate was able to translate whole sentences instead of each part as before, giving more natural results.

Currently, Google Translate supports more than 100 languages, with over 100 billion daily usage on both the web and mobile applications.

You finished reading the article "'Sister Google' has just been updated to a more natural new voice, invited to listen" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

---