

Skype released version 6.9 of the bug fix on Mac

Skype 6.9 for Mac fixes name errors overlap with the message section. In addition, the new version also changes the way screens are shared on Mac.

Skype recently released a new version of 6.9 for Mac users to fix a previously annoying bug: The name field is overlapped with the message on some profile pages.

In addition, Skype also changed the way the sharing screen works, helping you share only a specific window you want instead of sharing the entire screen.

Skype also allows when searching from the toolbar, the phone numbers you store in your Mac contacts will appear in the search results. Mac users can download the new version of Skype here .
