

Sony added a range of options for Vaio F, L and E series

Vaio EB and EC series will have Full HD resolution screen while Vaio F will be stronger with new Nvidia discrete graphics card

Vaio EB and EC series will have Full HD resolution screen while Vaio F will be more powerful with Nvidia's new discrete graphics card .

First in this upgrade to include the Vaio F line of 16.4 inch screen, adding new discrete graphics card Nvidia GeForce GT 425M 1GB VRAM memory with the price only increased by 50 USD. This model will also be equipped with the latest USB 3.0 standard port.

Vaio EB and EC will have a Full HD standard screen. Photo: Engadget .

Meanwhile, Sony Vaio L's "all-in-one" PC series is upgraded with the optional Blu-ray optical drive to enhance entertainment power. Model equipped with Blu-ray optical drive, multi-touch screen will cost about 2,199 USD.

The Vaio E series has also been augmented by some very significant options this time. Two models of Vaio EA (14-inch screen) and Vaio EB (15.4-inch screen) have a 2.53 GHz and Core i5-580M Core i5-460M processor with 2.66 GHz speed and price increase. Adds 130 and 230 USD respectively.

Vaio EB also has another option along with Vaio EC (17.3-inch screen) screen resolution increased from 1,366 x 768 pixels to Full HD 1,920 x 1,080 pixels, this upgrade will be very attractive price. , 50 USD.

Users can order models with new upgrades as above starting from October 9 on Sony sales website.

You finished reading the article "Sony added a range of options for Vaio F, L and E series" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.