Detroit: Become Human is a future game in the US city of Detroit, a time when robots with artificial intelligence have transformed into human-like robots and replaced people in many areas. The game revolves around the story of 'enlightened' robots who stand up to human rights on par with humans, be socially equal and demand recognition as a new species of wisdom.

Detroit: Become Human is not an FPS action game despite playing a 3rd person perspective. It is developed in the direction of a puzzle, cinematic adventure. The game has multiple branches to develop different content and outcomes based on the player's decision.

The game has beautiful graphics. The producer took a year of recording with more than 300 actors, to create more than 37,000 motion models to make the game's characters as realistic as possible.
