

Sony stopped updating software for Xperia 2012 phones except Xperia T, TX and V

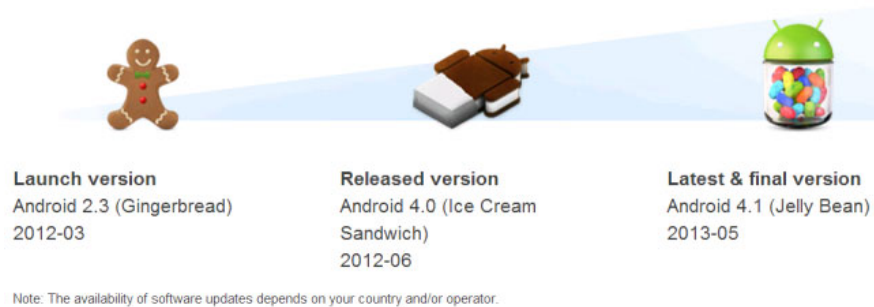

Sony has updated the software support information pages for Xperia phones released in 2012. Accordingly, all Xperia 2012 products end in Android 4.0 or Android 4.1.

Sony has updated the software support information pages for Xperia phones released in 2012. Accordingly, all Xperia 2012 products end in Android 4.0 or Android 4.1.

Only 3 products in the Xperia 2012 series are still unknown whether or not to continue to update the Xperia T, Xperia TX and Xperia V. Sony said the KitKat update for the three phones is still in the review stage. Therefore, users of Xperia T, TX and V still have hope to update.

Xperia 2012 phones will stop at Android 4.0 Ice Cream Sandwich version including Xperia U, Xperia tipo (and tipo dual version), Xperia sola, Xperia miro and Xperia arc S. Android 4.1 Jelly Bean will be Android versions finally with Xperia SL, Xperia ion, Xperia acro S, Xperia J, Xperia go, Xperia S and Xperia P.

Xperia™ S Android version overview

The Xperia S ends with Android 4.1 Jelly Bean version

We will continue to update when there are updates for users for Xperia T, TX and V.

You finished reading the article "Sony stopped updating software for Xperia 2012 phones except Xperia T, TX and V" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.