

Sony: There will be Vaio touch screen

Sony has just announced plans to launch the Vaio touchscreen product line soon after Windows 7 officially launched.

Sony has just announced plans to launch the Vaio touchscreen product line soon after Windows 7 officially launched .

Sony Vaio Laptop is famous for its glittery beauty.

Mike Abray, senior vice president in charge of Sony's Technology Products Division, said Sony is highly appreciative of Windows, so it will take full advantage of the features it supports. Which is worth noting is the touch screen support feature.

Microsoft also confirmed that Windows 7 is the first version of Windows to fully support multi-touch screen technology.

Currently Sony has not revealed any information about the first version of Vaio integrated touch screen will be released in the near future. Many anticipate that there will probably be a full line of Vaio touchscreen laptops and even PC 'all in one' Vaio touch screen.

Sony leader also announced the right date of Windows 7 launch - on 22/10 to come here - the company will also introduce some Vaio touch screen models.
