

Sony updated Vaio S, Z, added Vaio E series model

Vaio S, Z update to Ivy Bridge processor while the Vaio E Series welcomes two new members, the 15.5-inch Vaio E and another 17.7-inch screen.

Vaio S, Z update to Ivy Bridge processor while the Vaio E Series welcomes two new members, the 15.5-inch Vaio E and another 17.7-inch screen.

Vaio E 15.5 inches.

Sony today launched two large screen versions in the Vaio E Series "family" with a size of 15.5 inches (resolution of 1366 x 768 pixels) and 17.7 inches (resolution of 1,600 x 900 pixels). However, this new product line does not come with Ivy Bridge processor upgrades but instead of a more powerful graphics card configuration, optional Blu-ray optical drive for premium entertainment.

Vaio E 17.7 inches.

Both Vaio E 15 and 17 are equipped with Intel Core i5-2450M processor, AMD Radeon 7650M graphics card with 1 GB or 2 GB VRAM, 750 GB hard drive, integrated webcam, USB 3.0 for charging feature The device is turned off, HDMI, Bluetooth and Wi-Fi.

Vaio S 15 inches.

Meanwhile, Sony continues to insist on the two lines for the business as Vaio S with the latest processor options in the screen sizes of 13.3 and 15.5 inches. Both have backlit keyboards, slim design with aluminum, magnesium or carbon fiber covers. The 15.5-inch screen will have a IPS resolution panel with Full HD 1080p standard while the 13.3-inch screen is not yet publicly available.

Vaio S 13 inches.

Vaio S 13 will come with Intel Core i5 or i7 options while Vaio S 15 will run Intel Core i7-3612QM, up to 8 GB RAM and VIDIA GT640M LE graphics card (with an integrated Intel HD 4000 chip) . Vaio S 15 also has a hard drive capacity of 1 TB while both have SSD options. Sony will also provide additional battery options for up to 14 hours.

You finished reading the article "Sony updated Vaio S, Z, added Vaio E series model" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.