

Steps to use feeds in OneNote

The feed in OneNote will combine notes from different applications, including Samsung Notes OneNote and Sticky Notes when we are signed in with the same Microsoft account.

The feed in OneNote will combine notes from different applications, including Samsung Notes OneNote and Sticky Notes when we are signed in with the same Microsoft account. This makes it possible to combine notes together. Currently, this feed feature applies to the OneNote Windows 10 app, OneNote on PC, OneNote web, and the OneNote Android version. The following article will guide you how to use the feed in OneNote.

OneNote Feed User Guide

Step 1:

At the interface in OneNote, we click on the square icon as shown below to open the feed in OneNote.

Right there on the right edge of the screen showing the Feed interface is a feed, including newly created and recently edited notes. We just need to click on the content of the note we want to see.

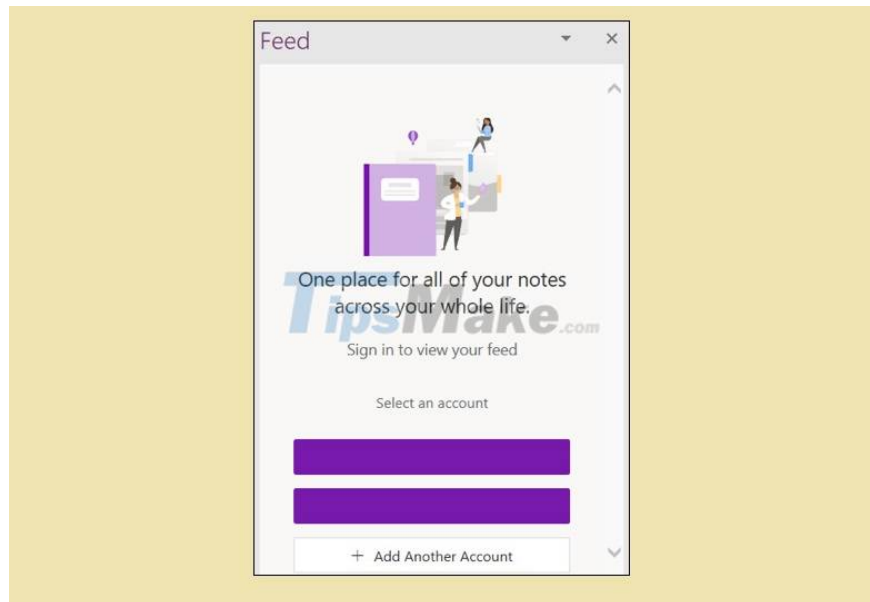

Step 2:

Feed supports users to convert Microsoft documents, in case you use multiple Microsoft accounts to use OneNote.

We click on your current account and then select Sign out to exit the current account.

Now an interface will appear for you to choose the account you want to use, or click Add Another Account to log in with the other Microsoft account you want.

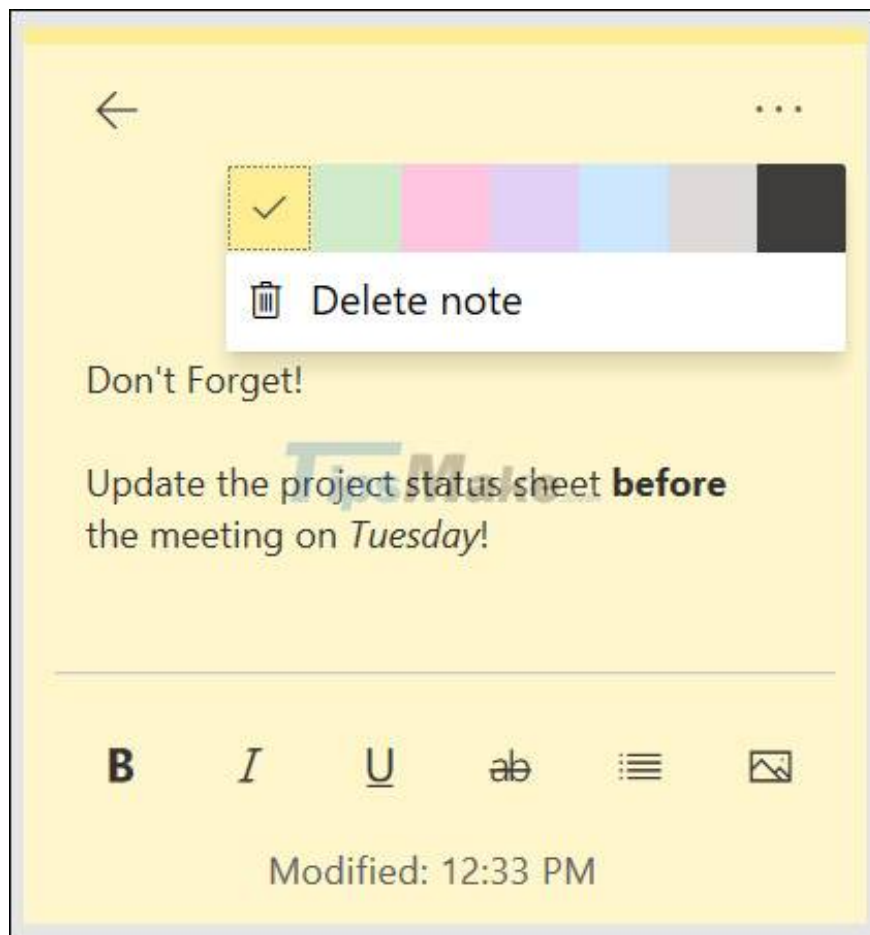

Step 3:

From the feed management interface you can immediately add a note by clicking Add a note.

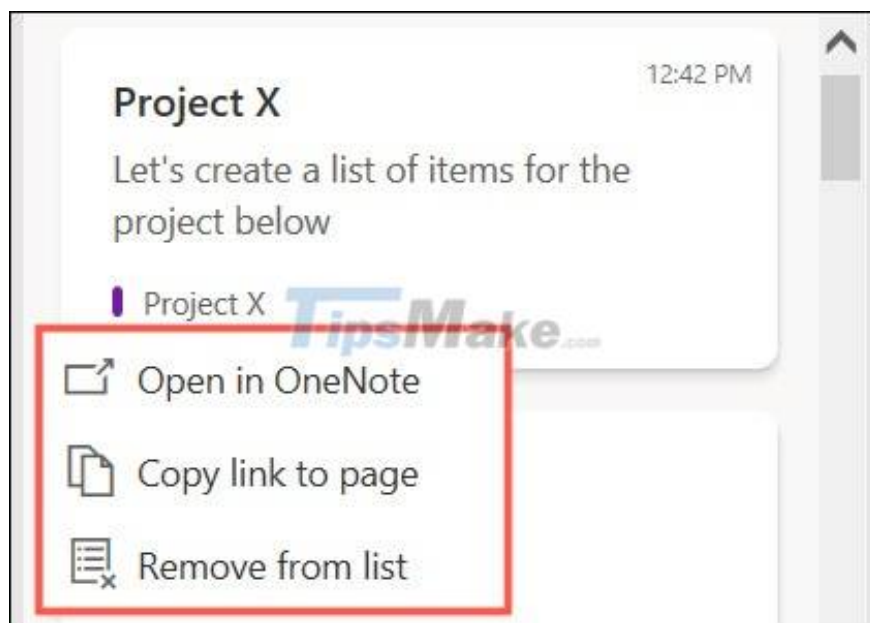

Next we enter the note into the interface as usual and adjust the format for the content as usual. Click on the 3-dot icon to change the color or show the toolbar to adjust the format for the note.

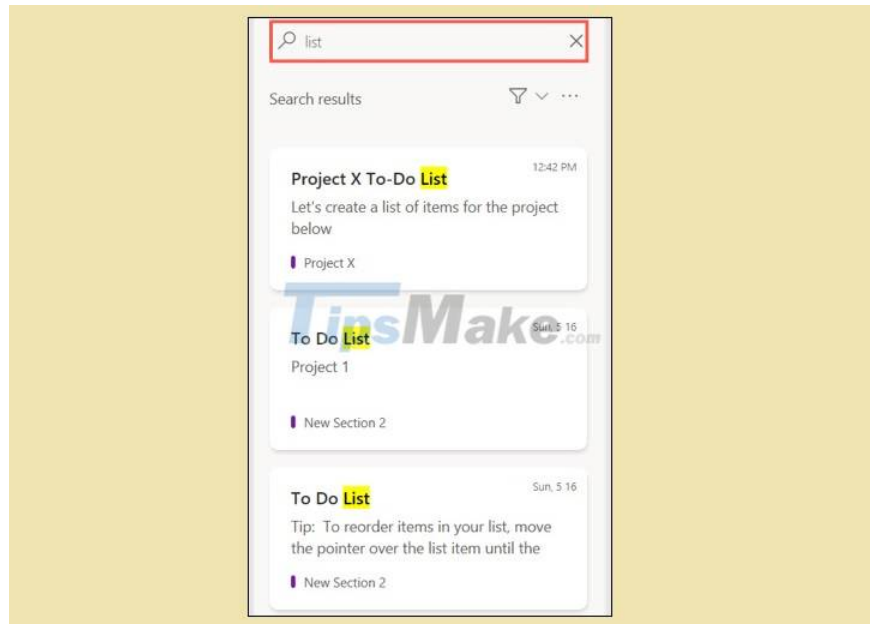

Step 4:

When clicking on the content in the feed, a menu displays with annotation options as shown below.

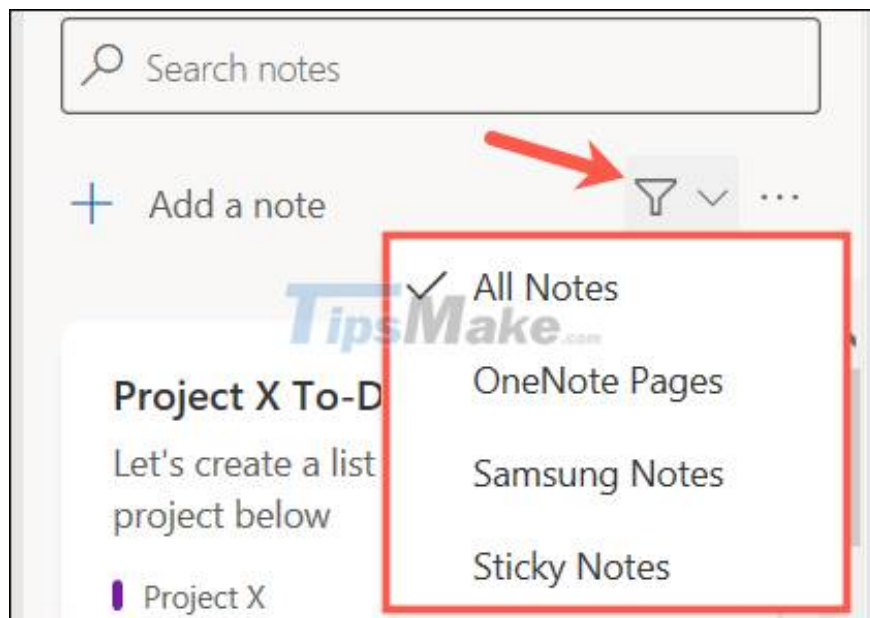

Step 5:

To quickly find notes in the feed management interface, we enter keywords in the search bar on the same interface. The results below show notes with keywords that match the words you entered.

If you click on the filter icon, a list of notes from OneNote Pages, Samsung Notes or Sticky Notes will appear. You can click on any feed you want to find.

You finished reading the article "Steps to use feeds in OneNote" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.