

Stunned with iPhone Xs for nearly 70 billion VND made of meteors

This iPhone Xs has a glass back not made of gold, diamond or any variant of carbon but an incredibly hard material on Earth, the Henbury meteorite fell to Australia in 1931.

The 512GB version of the iPhone Xs Max at a price of $ 1,449 is nothing compared to Brikk's iPhone Xs, which specializes in refurbishing iPhones with precious stones and rare materials.

Recently, Brikk has announced a unique iPhone with 1-0-2 and the most exorbitant price in the world. This iPhone Xs has a glass back not made of gold, diamond or any variant of carbon but an incredibly hard material on Earth, the Henbury meteorite fell to Australia in 1931.

The Ceramic Collection

Previously, Brikk also launched luxury iPhone XS with ceramic and diamond.

According to Brikk's website, the Henbury meteorite contains a sample of metal crystals with very beautiful motifs called Widmanstätten. These crystal samples cannot be found in any Earth-originated rock because it is only formed in the metal core with a gradual cooling process that lasts for millions of years, and only a few million years a year. degree.

Brikk said there will be two alien iPhone Xs versions, the Double and Omni, with a starting price of $ 39,995, the most expensive version for $ 99,995.

The Special Editions

If you're overpaid and don't know what to use, consider the poisonous Phone Xs called Lux iPhone XS Royal Jade, made from three-color jade green, orange and purple stones, which are being displayed by Brikk. sold at prices up to $ 3 million (equivalent to 69.8 billion). And to be able to buy it, you must be a member of Concierge, Brikk's exclusive program for high-end customers.

Of course, these luxury iPhone Xs are only produced in limited quantities.

See more:

1. Check the durability of the smallest phone in the world and unexpected results
2. The 10 most exotic 'special edition' phones in history
3. Why is the smartphone screen always off when you listen to the phone?

You finished reading the article "Stunned with iPhone Xs for nearly 70 billion VND made of meteors" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.