

Synchronize antivirus technology for mobile devices

Kaspersky Lab and Tencent (China) have announced that the two sides have been agreed to synchronize antivirus technology for mobile devices.

The leading software company in Kaspersky Lab's information security solution and internet service provider Tencent (China) has announced that the two parties have been agreed to synchronize Kaspersky anti-virus technology for mobile devices. Lab enters Tencent's QQ Security Expert security program.

Through the cooperation between the two companies, users will experience a unique and increasingly more effective security service by combining Kaspersky Lab's technology and Tencent's own antivirus products.

In recent years, the explosion of widespread mobile SMS messaging, phone viruses, spyware and malware aimed at smartphones has caused privacy, personal account information and even business secrets. serious threat. In addition, many frauds on mobile devices originating from the attack of malware have also appeared.

As the largest antivirus company in Europe, Kaspersky Lab has repeatedly provided timely security solutions against multiple IT security threats on a global scale. Meanwhile, Tencent, China's leading carrier, recently set up mobile security centers using QQ Security Expert to better serve the vast domestic market. The cooperation between the two companies will bring positive effects and benefit millions of users.

You finished reading the article "Synchronize antivirus technology for mobile devices" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

---