

Tabs on iPhone are easier to manage with Opera

Opera is rolling out a major update to its Opera One browser on iPhone, designed to tackle the clutter caused by having too many tabs open.

Opera is rolling out a major update to its Opera One browser on iPhone, designed to tackle the clutter caused by having too many tabs open.

The new system offers a grid and list view, allowing you to choose how you view your tabs, as well as the ability to group them into color-coded collections for different projects. Another new feature is a search option that makes it easy to find a tab you had open a few days ago, just by typing in the title or URL of the page.

This update isn't just for tabs. Opera also adds quicker access to the built-in Aria AI, which is located right in the bottom bar for one-tap access. You can also customize the menu to bring the features you care about closer.

Opera for iPhone has added features that make it easier to manage your tabs. You can now group them by topic and quickly search through the list when you need them.

You finished reading the article "Tabs on iPhone are easier to manage with Opera" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.