

The 11 Best Students Podcasts of 2021

Learning is always useful, no matter how old you are, what's your occupation, and what you learn. It allows you to grow a lot, if not professionally, then personally for sure.

Now, there are lots of ways to learn, however, many of them can be boring for an overwhelmingly large number of people, so it's always worth considering the modern alternatives. One of them is the podcast. Being a kind of radio program revival, podcasts have become extremely popular lately as they are often made for the people by the people.

Picture 1 of The 11 Best Students Podcasts of 2021

Broadcasting the Future

While the term 'podcast' has appeared not long ago, it's, in fact, a very long existing form of media existing for over 100 years in the form of radio broadcasts. What makes broadcast different is its absolute availability on the internet, which makes it an almost perfect teacher for many. Essentially, a podcast presents an idea or overviews a concept of one or a few people in the audio form available in audio stores or through streaming services.

First and foremost, such a form of knowledge spreading is perfect because of its interactive nature. You can pause at any time or rewind what you've missed (unless it's a live podcast). Second, it helps in learning a lot. Many experts who would go on and write research papers for sale online would learn new things exactly through podcasts. The thing is that they help not only in learning the ideas they focus on but also the language they are produced in. So, it's basically, a perfect 2-in-1 teacher. Here are some of the best podcasts for students to learn something new. And, if you're an international student, you'll also be able to perfect your English as well.

1. The Tim Ferriss Show. Seemingly an ordinary talk show, the program provides more than you can think of. By interviewing influential cultural and media figures, Tim Ferris deconstructs their daily lives to provide invaluable advice for self-improvement.
2. TED Talks Daily. Yes, TED Talks exist not only in video or transcript form. Podcasts produced by TED are just as valuable as their video counterparts, with lots of different people from around the world discussing valuable and important things and experiences.
3. College Info Geek. A podcast produced for the students by the students. Although the current hosts are no longer students, they take an active part in student life and document all experiences in a very accessible form.
4. Brain Science. A wonderful podcast that shares the latest news and innovation regarding the work of the human brain and the improvement of its functionality. An absolutely invaluable masterpiece podcast for all students who want to improve themselves and focus on their academics.
5. Overheard at National Geographic. A great informational podcast for those who want and perfect their English. Essentially, the podcasts retell some of the highlights from the National Geographic Channel. Most experts from writing judge recommend this podcast not only for how informative it is but also for its

- comprehensible English. One of the best options for academic improvement for sure.
6. 6. Rationally Speaking. A great podcast for those students who want to become decent citizens of the modern world. Discussing topics, such as power regimes, political decisions, stereotypes, and discrimination, the podcast's hosts do a wonderful job at presenting modern societal issues in the brightest of lights.
  7. 7. BBC Discovery. Similar to Overheard at National Geographic, yet with more British English. Overviewing different interesting facts and innovations in science, this podcast is universally great for all learners.
  8. 8. You Are Not So Smart. A great general informational podcast that debunks myths and discusses human and machine irrationality of thinking. A great stimulus for rational and critical thinking, this podcast will additionally help lots of students to improve their approaches to learning.
  9. 9. SciFri. Not really a conventional educational podcast, which focuses on different news in various sciences and is released on Fridays. Notable for hosting famous scientific guests like Elon Musk.
  10. 10. Comedy Bang Bang. If you're into entertainment, this one will definitely work for you. Some of the best comedy pieces and sketches are born here. Hosting some of the best comedians from all over the United States, this podcast will never get you bored and will certainly help you learn American English a bit.
  11. 11. This American Life. Another great all-American podcast that provides quite a lot of useful information about the country, its news, and culture. You won't even notice how you start understanding and then speaking English.

Sharpen Your Ear

Picture 2 of The 11 Best Students Podcasts of 2021

One of the best ways to learn a language or anything new whatsoever is to do it with pleasure. When you're having fun learning, you're truly learning. By making associations with something positive and fun, you'll learn quicker than you think and have fun along the way. Learning is one of the best experiences one can have, yet, it's often underrated due to the conventional ways of realization. With podcasts, however, this problem can be solved.

BIO: Michael Carr is one kind of writer. He has a huge enthusiasm, is constantly on the move, and prefers learning with fun. With such an attitude, Michael's articles often emit interestingness and practical usefulness.

You finished reading the article "The 11 Best Students Podcasts of 2021" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.