

The 35-dollar laptop was revealed on television

India's Gadget Gurus TV channel has just released the first video to show off the world's cheapest laptop.

India's Gadget Gurus TV channel has just released the first video to show off the world's cheapest laptop. This 35 USD laptop is advertised to run Android, owns 2GB RAM, Wi-Fi, 3G and has a microSD card slot.

A $ 35 laptop is like a tablet.

Last month, India announced it would produce the world's cheapest laptop for $ 35 for students. Sellers are skeptical about this shocking statement, and many argue that India's plan is hard to realize.

However, India's Digital Gadget Gurus TV channel has just received a real feel for this product. A clip of the 35-dollar laptop images erased doubts from consumers as well as the tech world.

India's HR Development Minister - Kapil Sibal - shared information about the world's cheapest laptop. The $ 35 laptop with a touch screen will be a response to a low-cost computer that is part of Professor Nicholas Negroponte's OLPC project.

35 USD laptop also has basic entertainment functions.

According to Mr. Sibal, the laptop is equipped with 2GB RAM, Wi-Fi, 3G connectivity and data storage with microSD card. The device runs Google's Android OS. In addition, the camera can also record videos, with integrated webcam.

India intends to launch this product in mid-2011, the main subjects are students and universities. Selling prices as well as sales are not yet announced.

Source: CNet, Engaget

You finished reading the article "The 35-dollar laptop was revealed on television" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.