

The best free music download apps on Android

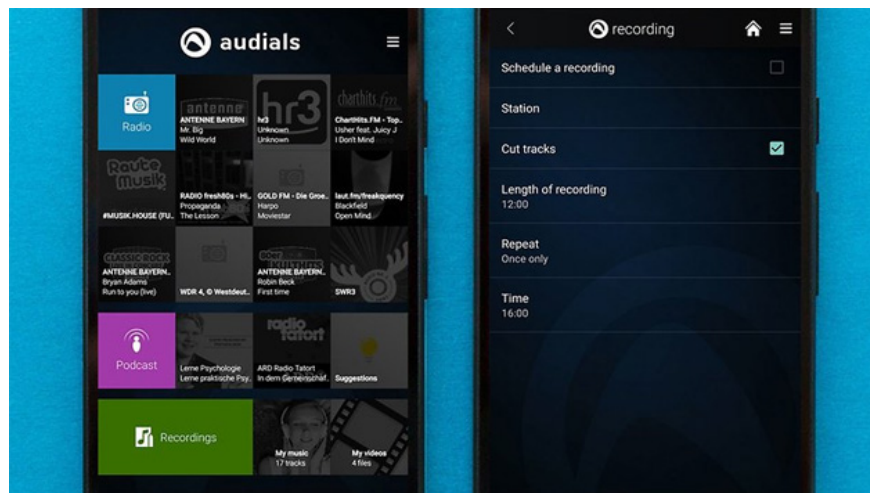

Downloading music seems to be on the path of extinction, with online music services like Spotify and Deezer taking leadership positions. However, if you're still interested in how to download free tunes on your Android phone to listen offline, check out the following free music download apps.

Downloading music seems to be on the path of extinction, with streaming services like Spotify and Deezer taking leadership positions. However, if you're still interested in how to download free tunes on your Android phone to listen offline, check out the following free music download apps.

1. Top 20 best audio editing apps for Android

1. Radio Player by Audials : recording from radio

Radio Player by Audials is one of the best ways to download free music on Android but this is a bit unusual. Although you can download multiple versions with Radio Player by Audials, they all come from radio.

Radio Player by Audials boasts tens of thousands of radio stations from many countries, finds radio channels and starts recording. This is a comprehensive, well-designed application with great detection features, EQ control and Chromecast support. In addition, Radio Player by Audials allows recording schedules to automatically save great music from your favorite stations. This is the best application for this type of music and it's completely free.

2. SoundCloud: the best in quality and quantity

The service is free and offers thousands of free songs (with about 12 hours of audio uploaded every minute), mixes and live recordings. Not all but most of them can be downloaded. The application has many genres, which makes it a great place to discover new music.

3. 4shared

4shared has a huge library of free music. The application allows searching large 4shared databases on music and automatically filters searches so that they only display MP3 files. Downloaded music will automatically be added to the 15 GB 4shared cloud folder, ready to listen offline. You can add your own tunes to that folder.

This is a great application to find classic music, without copyright, as well as unknown melodies of emerging artists. The interface looks a bit old but will appeal to users of older Android versions.

4. RockMyRun: suitable for exercising

RockMyRun allows downloading music to play offline or simply store it. RockMyRun provides DJ-mix playlists for exercise songs.

You can combine BPM with your heart rate, filter the playlist length to match your exercise or use the myBeat feature to automatically change the tone to match your current state. What better than DJ can customize according to your workout style.

5. Google Play Music : for Android believers

This is one of the top Play Store apps to download music. Google Play Music is Google's music market on Android, but it also regularly provides free songs and albums to download. Google Play Music is also a music player of its own accord.

6. Palco MP3: a place to enjoy Brazilian music

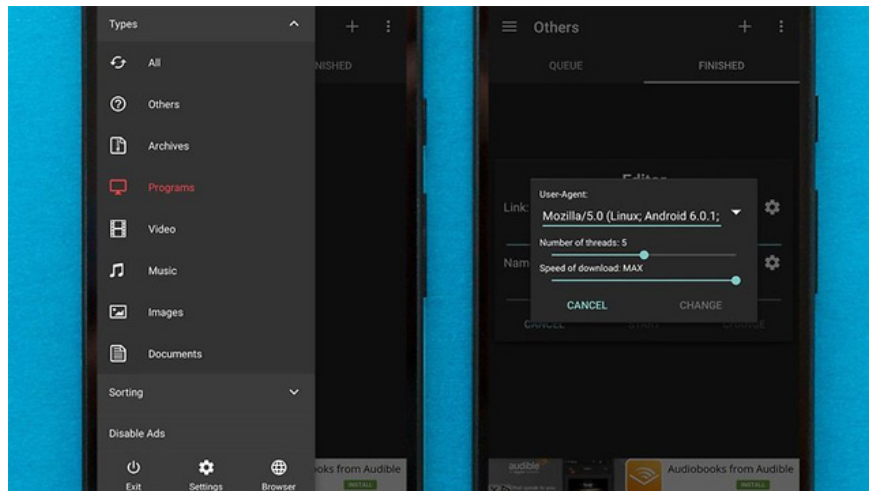

Palco MP3 is a free platform for independent Brazilian musicians to share their songs with the world. They currently have a list of over 100,000 artists spread across a wide range of genres.

Using this application, you can stream radio stations, arrange playlists of your favorite tunes and download songs to your phone for offline listening. Whether you are looking for samba, bossa nova, hip-hop or electronica, Palco is available. So find out and discover what Brazil has to offer.

7. Advanced Download Manager: fast download speed

Advanced Download Manager allows downloading three files at once, including MP3 and MP4. It includes a number of different settings so that you can customize the download method such as speed limits (to not use too much bandwidth) and the number of simultaneous downloads.

However, there is a downside that it is very difficult for users to search for songs in the application browser, but once you find what you need, the music download job is very simple.

8. Anghami: the place to search for Arab music

Are you a fan of Arab music? Anghami targets users in the Middle East, but for those who do not live there, this is a great source for free Arabic songs. The service is free with advertising, but worth exploring new music.
