Lapland Finland

Did you know that some sources state that the origin of the Santa Clause legend may have gotten its start in one of the Nordic Countries? If you were to ask anyone in Finland where Santa Claus is from they will most likely tell you that he is from Korvatunturi, which potentially makes Lapland Finland his hometown. Check out Lapland to see the man himself, watch the elves work in their workshops, and explore the forests on reindeer-led sleighs. Visiting Lapland is just like being in a classic Christmas film.

New York City USA

There is a reason why so many American Christmas films take place in New York City. The brightly lit city is beautifully made to be accented in the snow. The large tree in the middle of Times Square is practically symbolic of the way many Americans celebrate the holiday. Of course, there are all of the wonderful shops, hotels, and restaurants to check out as well. It's not hard to see why this city is one of the best Christmas destinations in the world.

Bondi Beach Australia

When most people think of Christmas they tend to think of cold climates and warm fires. But not in Australia! Christmas is celebrated in the middle of summer, therefore all of those bright twinkling lights and good cheer don't compete with the bitter cold and snow. This means that everyone who celebrates the holiday in this country gets to enjoy a beautiful warm day. It also means that for many Australians, Christmas time doesn't mean cozy pajamas and fires. It means flip flops, or as they call them, thongs, sunscreen, and of course a trip to the beach.

Amsterdam, Netherlands

It seems that Santa Claus has a lot of great connections in the Norse region of the world. In Amsterdam, the story of Santa Claus has been passed through the ages. The homes built back in the 16th and 17th centuries are decorated with soft twinkling lights every December. With fireworks, Champagne, goodies, and more, it's easy to enjoy the 12 days of Christmas. Especially when you stay through the New Year.

Munich, Germany

Munich Germany is well known as being a beautiful Christmas Destination, and it very rarely, if ever, disappoints the crowds who visit during the holidays. Dublin, Ireland

Take some time and visit the capital of Ireland this year. With a 12-day Christmas Market, Tons of Christmas Lights, and of course the overall abundance of holiday cheer. This is a fun-filled place that is sure to be a delightful holiday destination.

Riga, Latvia

Just one look at this beautiful town will make you feel as if you had been transported directly into the illustration of an old holiday fairy tale. The adorable cottages and brick buildings become accented adorably by the winter snow. During Christmas, you can also take part in many holiday traditions which include log dragging, stitch crafts, and of course an abundance of traditional foods to cook and eat.

Tallinn, Estonia

Going to Tallinn is like stepping into a fairy tale. The city is home to a legendary Christmas market. Travel back in time as you shop for sweets, Christmas decorations, or even make handicrafts of your own. Santa is there to meet and greet the children and serve as the market's master of ceremonies. Don't leave without enjoying a plate of sausages and potatoes and a cup of golgi. Be sure to stay in the city center so you are in the middle of the action and fully experience this true winter wonderland.
