Since LG unveiled the launch of its new high-end G8 ThinQ smartphone in the first half of this year, there have been many rumors as well as a leaked image of this cult flagship. A few hours ago, the "holy" leak of information Evan Blass just shared the latest leaked images clearly showing the LG G8 ThinQ from every angle, is expected to be released at the Global Mobile Exhibition ( Mobile World Congress) in Barcelona later this month.

1. LG will release both LG V50 and LG G8 at the same time this month?

Although LG has not officially provided specific images about the design and design of this flagship, but technically, the company has published a lot of important information. LG has confirmed that it will sell a phone called LG G8 ThinQ complete with 3D Camera and a more advanced face unlock feature using the Time of Flight image sensor produced by Infineon. This technology will obviously improve face and AR recognition on the LG G8, and will allow you to take better selfies in all lighting conditions, while using less energy than FaceID. Apple's. In addition, LG G8 will also be equipped with 4K LCD screen for a good virtual reality experience and using the latest Snapdragon 855 processor, for faster processing speed and support for more AI applications.

Going back to the recent leaked images of Evan Blass, we can see that in terms of appearance, this phone looks quite similar to last year's LG G7 ThinQ with rabbit ear screen, dual camera settings and Rear fingerprint sensor. A slight change is that the rear dual camera is likely to be placed horizontally instead of vertically like on the G7 last year.

1. The most remarkable smartphone models 5G will be released in February, who will lead the game?

Looking down at the bottom, other notable details including USB-C, external speakers and grace, 3.5mm headphone jacks haven't been omitted yet! 2 sides, there will not be much noticeable details with the presence of familiar buttons such as volume up and down keys, power key and activation button dedicated Google assistant, similar to on LG G7 ThinQ.

There have also been rumors that one of LG's upcoming devices will support the second screen. Although the leaked images of Evan Blass do not show similarities, it is also possible that the second screen will appear as an extended and unavailable site that you will have to purchase. In terms of selling price, LG G8 ThinQ will most likely not exceed $ 1,000.

1. Will LG G8 be equipped with 2 screens?

You won't have to wait any longer, LG is expected to launch its next flagship at a special event ahead of the February 24 Mobile World Congress, let's see the information. Whether the leak is correct or not.
