

The emergence of poetry on Vietcombank website is caused by 'negligence technical staff', not hacked

Vietcombank has affirmed that Vietcombank's website system has not been attacked, the above incident is due to technical staff negligently updating the test data into the archive when upgrading the database.

At noon on April 13, Vietcombank's website suddenly appeared two poetic sentences about student life. " Hundred years of Kieu is still a student / student is a natural thing. " The bank account appears with information described as "Hanoi National University" when shared via Facebook. As soon as the incident occurred, many opinions suggested that Vietcombank's website was attacked by hackers.

Vietcombank has affirmed that the website system of Vietcombank has not been attacked, the above incident is due to the technicians who have negligently updated the test data into the archive when upgrading the database.

Immediately after detection, this negligence was detected promptly and adjusted accordingly. Vietcombank also affirmed that the website system of the bank is safe, non-intrusive and still works normally to meet the transaction needs of customers.

After the incident, Vietcombank has also implemented a series of measures to ensure no similar regret cases occur.

See more:

1. Vietcombank's website was hacked, showing two poetic sentences about student life
2. Ransomware appears to require users to play PUBG for 1 hour instead of ransom
3. A series of cult videos, billions of views on YouTube were hacked, renamed and deleted

4. Warning: Detecting more than 1000 Cisco router and switch devices in Vietnam has a serious security error
5. Warning: GandCrab extortionist code is attacking Vietnam

You finished reading the article "The emergence of poetry on Vietcombank website is caused by 'negligence technical staff', not hacked" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.