

The famous news reader Flipboard updates Windows 8

Microsoft has promised to work with Flipboard to bring this popular news reader application to their Windows 8 operating system. And today, Flipboard has officially updated Windows 8.1 - an upgrade of Windows 8 that Microsoft released last month.

Microsoft has promised to work with Flipboard to bring this popular news reader application to their Windows 8 operating system. And today, Flipboard has officially updated Windows 8.1 - an upgrade of Windows 8 that Microsoft released last month.

If you've used Flipboard on iOS and Android, the experience on Windows 8.1 is quite similar. Articles from the news sources that you enter in Flipboard will display "floating" very vividly. You can create your own Live Tile for each of your favorite themes, then pin this Live Tile to the OS's Start Screen screen .

The articles are also arranged like in a current paper magazine. You can search for articles and documents, thereby adding these data to your application on your computer. Of course, the Flipboard for Windows 8.1 is also designed to be optimized for the touch operation of the operating system. You can swipe back from the bottom to show applications such as "refresh", edit .

If you swipe down from the top edge of the application, Flipboard will display more articles from the article author you are reading, or articles that other users are reading. Flipboard also supports Snap feature of Windows 8 to help you use this application in parallel with other applications. If interested, you can download the application here.

You finished reading the article "The famous news reader Flipboard updates Windows 8" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
