

The Galaxy S10 can now stream games directly from the PC

Galaxy S10 owners can now use the PlayGal Wax Link app to stream games from PC to mobile phone.

Galaxy S10 owners can now use the PlayGalaxy Link app to stream games from PC to their mobile phone with just a few simple setup steps.

According to a shared post on SamMobile, version 1.0.5 of the PlayGalaxy Link app has added support for game streaming apps for Galaxy S10e, Galaxy S10, Galaxy S10 + and Galaxy S10. 5G.

By using PlayGalaxy Link, you can link your Samsung account on both computer and phone to find and manage games installed on the computer quickly. These games will then appear on your phone, you just need to select one of them to be ready to stream.

Games can be streamed through various forms of connectivity, including 4G, 5G and WiFi. You can stream games wherever WiFi is or while on the go using a 4G / 5G connection. However, these are all paid services, so pay attention to your data consumption and choose the most economical form of connection. If you don't own the Galaxy Note 10 or S10, or the PlayGalaxy Link app isn't available on your mobile device, you can still stream games thanks to a game streaming service called Parsec. Just download the app at the link below then follow the instructions, the process is extremely simple and only takes a few minutes.

Basically, PlayGalaxy Link and Parsec are the two platforms that share many similarities, so the experience on both applications is not much different. Wish you happy gaming!

1. Link to download Parsec: <https://parsecgaming.com/>
2. Link to download PlayGalaxy Link: <https://playgalaxy.com/download>

You finished reading the article "The Galaxy S10 can now stream games directly from the PC" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

---