

The jailbreak method for iPad is ready

After 'unlocking', the iPad can customize the screen background image and access and install different applications.

After " unlocking ", the iPad can customize the screen background image and access and install different applications.

A group of hackers came up with a software to exploit the vulnerability in the iPad operating system called " Spirit " that allows users to " control " more than their tablet.

This is a very remarkable method because it can access firmware 3.1.2, 3.1.1 and 3.2. After installation, users can use the iPad as a modem, customize the screen background image, access, install a variety of different applications. However, since this is only a beta, users need to backup data before proceeding.

Apple has also warned in the past, this " unlocking " can harm users' devices as it paves the way for hackers to hack into machines and exploit data inside. In addition, the jailbreak can also invalidate the warranty for the device.

Below is a video describing the process of jailbreaking the iPad.
