

The most expensive giant pink diamond in the world has just been found

A Russian mining company that unearthed a pink diamond could be the most expensive gem ever.

1. Official: We have a new physical state: time crystal
2. When you get rich, can you shop for me these 14 "heavenly" items?
3. Launching "artificial diamonds" into the universe lit the night sky

A Russian mining company that unearthed a pink diamond could be the most expensive gem ever.

This pink diamond stone weighs 27.85 carats and was recovered by Alrosa PJSC from a sediment mine in the northwest of the Yakutia region in Russia's Far East.

According to Alrosa, the pink diamond has a special jewelry quality, without any defects. The size of the diamond is 22.47 x 15.69 x 10.9 mm.

Until this latest diamond was unearthed, Alrosa's biggest pink gem ever found weighed only 3.86 carats.

"Alrosa company experts are currently studying this gemstone to decide to sell it as a rough diamond or cut it down" - Evgeny Agureev, head of ALROSA's Sales Organization for know in a press release.

According to Alrosa, we claim that this may be the most expensive diamond of all time available at Alrosa. Agroev added: "The unique properties of this diamond make it an extremely valuable gemstone ."

Earlier this year, a very large pink diamond, weighing around 59.60 carats, was auctioned in Hong Kong for $ 71.2 million - the highest price paid at the auction.

You finished reading the article "The most expensive giant pink diamond in the world has just been found" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

---