

The most interesting thing when buying a computer in Microsoft Store

Microsoft retail stores don't usually create crowds like Apple stores, but that doesn't mean there's no fun in these stores, especially when you want to buy a new computer. .

Microsoft retail stores don't usually create crowds like Apple stores, but that doesn't mean there's no fun in these stores, especially when you want to buy a new computer. .

Reporter Joanna Stern of The Wall Street Journal pointed out that buying a computer at a Microsoft store means that it will not encounter the most annoying problem so far that software is applied by homeowners. Built-in application.

Picture 1 of The most interesting thing when buying a computer in Microsoft Store

Microsoft Store

" All laptops sold through retail stores and Microsoft websites do not have software from the manufacturer ." Stern writes in an article about how to remove unnecessary software on your new computer. " Instead of preloading the trial version of Norton or McAfee to fight viruses, Microsoft said it only left Windows Defender available on Windows 8 by default ."

This is very important because Microsoft is really working to expand their presence in the retail world and even in negotiations to open a large new retail store on New York's Fifth Avenue with Apple store.

The computer will no longer have applications from the manufacturer

Microsoft has long been annoyed with all of the manufacturer's pre-installed software on Windows computers and if the company can expand its own stores they can help buyers significantly reduce the need for applications. must be removed in the future.

You finished reading the article "The most interesting thing when buying a computer in Microsoft Store" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.