

The movie's release date has been moved to 100 years later, so you won't be able to watch it in your entire life

The science fiction movie 100 Years (Vietnamese title: 100 Years) is one of the strangest projects ever made.

The science fiction movie 100 Years is one of the strangest projects ever made.

The film was invested and produced by the famous Cognac brand in France in 2015, set in the world 100 years later and inspired by the 100-year process of producing wines.

The movie was promoted with the attached content "The movie you will never see" which surprised the audience. Even more shocking, the release date of 100 Years is set for November 18, 2115, exactly a century before its release.

100 Years was directed by Robert Rodriguez and written by John Malkovich. Over the years, there have been 3 teasers of the movie released but according to the producer, they will not be in the official work.

Through the teaser, we can know that the male lead is played by American actor John Malkovich, the female lead is played by Shuya Chang of Taiwan (China), Chilean actor Marko Zaror will play the villain.

The film has been completed and the content has been kept extremely secret. The film is kept in an extremely secure safe and is currently being protected in France. The safe will be opened on the day of release and the movie will be announced.

The movie ticket is made of metal to ensure it remains intact until the screening. Invitations were sent to the director, screenwriter and 1,000 guests around the world.

You finished reading the article "The movie's release date has been moved to 100 years later, so you won't be able to watch it in your entire life" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.