

The new super book survival game is getting a lot of attention

The Game enthusiasts community has become vibrant with the appearance of a new tactical-style survival game. What you need to do is simply... live

When discussing survival games, we will immediately remember names like PUBG, Free Fire or Fortnite, where gamers will confront opponents directly with weapons to find the winner. But Siege Survival - a new survival game is bringing a lot of positive comments. Siege Survival takes you to a medieval world in turmoil by war, your task is not to fight, simply to be the head of an ancient city because if the city is lost, you are no longer there.

Siege Survival: Gloria Victis will bring players to the context of a medieval city besieged by enemy troops. The invaders poured in, looted and brutally killed. What you have left in your hand is the city walls and a few soldiers. You and your soldiers will fight to the last drop of blood. If you play the role of a small group of villagers inside, it sounds easy, but when you start, it's not easy. That is crafting, building the castle grounds as well as trying not to starve and resupply the army with whatever is needed. You can stockpile food, arrows,.

Hearing this, many people will probably not be interested because this is more like a tactical tower defense game, right? However, the survival nature of Siege Survival is clearly demonstrated by its realism. At night, you also have to hide out, find more food, water or loot in the neighboring castle to be able to survive for your castle. The inventory is limited in capacity, but it is also necessary to carry extra food and water to avoid exhaustion when being chased by the enemy. And more dangerous is to act like "bow to my grandfather in this dust" when you have to carry a torch to burn a corpse to avoid spreading the disease.

There was so much to do, from tending livestock, to cooking, to repairing weapons. Not to mention, your villagers also have to sleep in fear when the arrows and stone bullets may fall at any time. There are times when the water source is exhausted, you can rummage through the whole city and can't find a source of clean water, and that's when you question your morality. One is to rob people in the city to save themselves and push them to death, the other is to die.

To sum up, Siege Survival has been very successful in bringing constant tension to every gamer. No need for guns to kill, it still brings a very unique attraction to "survival system" players.
