

The Razer Blade costs $ 3,200 in Singapore

Razer's gaming laptop model first appeared in the market outside the US at a price that was more expensive than the old one, which cost only $ 2,799.

Razer's gaming laptop model first appeared in the market outside the US at a price that was more expensive than the old one, which cost only $ 2,799.

The Razer Blade has just been sold in Singapore for over $ 3,000. (Photo: Cnet).

The high-end Razer Blade laptop has just appeared in Singapore for SGD 4,000 (US $ 3,213.88). This product is sold from today. This is the first time the Razer Blade has been released in the US market.

According to Cnet, the Razer Blade has a slim design compared to other gaming laptops. The product is equipped with 17-inch anti-glare screen with Full HD resolution. However, the device only runs Intel Core i7 Sandy Bridge processor, 8GB RAM, Nvidia GeForce GT 555M graphics card, not like the rival Alienware or Asus has switched to Ivy Bridge chip with Kepler graphics card.

Razer products have a unique Switchblade UI. (Photo: Cnet).

In addition, this model is also equipped with Switchblade UI interface to customize the sub-screen with 10 icons or any function keys. This is considered the difference of the product compared to other gaming laptops. Razer, CEO and co-founder of Razer, said the company will launch the SDK Switchblade to help developers optimize their hardware.

You finished reading the article "The Razer Blade costs $ 3,200 in Singapore" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.