

The reasons why Web Designer feels sad

Don Elliott, a Web Designer and author of a post about the truth about Web Designer: 'I hope you will be surprised when I tell you about Web Designer'. .

Don Elliott , a Web Designer and author of a post about the truth about Web Designer: 'I hope you will be surprised when I tell you about Web Designer'. .

' If you feel something is not good, our mood will also feel bad .'

' And since I became a Designer for designing websites for more than a decade, what I really care about is that my site works well and makes sense for users directly. So when I say these reasons make me sad, I don't mean to say that I'm an offended individual. I am just a medium Designer and cannot provide you with the best designs that meet your goals .'

1. When you tell them that their design has no accents

What is the definition of Earth? It is a difficult question that one can only explain in general without a specific definition.

Which point is more stressed? Some things need to be 'thrown away' or make it better.

2. When you tell Designer: "I don't like this design"

This is perfectly acceptable, as long as you add a reason for them " why "! If they do not specify the reason, they will wonder and come up with hypothetical, old guesses.

The more silent and unexplainable you make them curious, the more time and money you spend and their gray matter.

3. Present your subjective opinions

What you define about the word "modern" can be completely different from the definition of the word "modern" by others. Each person will have a different mindset, so you can write the description in your descriptive words, not impose others to follow your pattern. In this case it will be a better solution.

4. Technical suggestions

Create a bigger logo, outline that shape, use embossing tools, etc. Instead of describing the signs, present your views and try to convince Designer to follow your way to overcome problem. Let your Designer decide the best way to fix problems in their own way.

5. Trustee

If you receive a trust and you are being 'circumvented' from this process before you can end something, that is your trouble.

A wise man once said: ' One of us will never be as silent as all of us . ' Feedback from an entire trustee will ensure that all proposals can be taken into account, and it will also ensure that all criticisms will contradict other criticisms.

In addition to the bright, glamorous appearance that people still see, the whole time in the Designer process will have to use their brains to design successfully and will certainly increase exponentially for each trustee. they received!

Refer to some of the following articles:

1. 10 reasons why sometimes people often lie
1. 10 reasons to add strength to try to pursue your dreams
1. 8 reasons to make you smarter and stronger when you're alone

Wish you have moments of fun!

You finished reading the article "The reasons why Web Designer feels sad" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.