

The secret to choosing dyed hair color that matches skin color

Choosing the right hair color for your skin color is quite difficult. However, if you know which hair color is 'standard' for your skin tone, everything will be simple and effective.

How to choose the right hair color for each skin tone

To choose the standard dyed hair color according to the skin tone, in addition to the skin tone, the skin tone is easily visible to the naked eye, you also need to identify the undertone that is the color under your skin. They are divided into 3 categories: warm undertone, cool undertone and neutral undertone. Based on the principle of choosing dyed hair color versus skin tone, cool undertone owners can choose warm colors and warm undertone can choose cold colors to complement their characteristics. With neutral undertone, almost any dyes are responsive. Also, whatever your skin tone or the color of the dye you're trying to try out, try to make sure their shades are darker or 2-tone lighter than your skin tone.

Here are some basic hair dyes and skin tones that you can consider:

Hair dyed brown

Cold brown

Cold brown almost not too fussy skin, but it will be the color that gives the best effect for warm undertone skin tones. You can refer to them with shades like dark brown, mocha, chestnut brown, chocolate brown .

Warm brown

If you have medium-neutral undertone skin tone, try warm shades like caramel, honey, golden brown, amber, cinnamon or mahogany . This is also considered a pretty suitable dye for light skin. Please note to add the skin tone below to get a more perfect combination of shades and tones.

Black hair

Cold black

Cold black tones like pure black, dark blue, espresso, licorice black . can work well with warm undertone or neutral undertone thanks to its effect on skin highlighting.

Warm black

With the advantage of being gentle and natural, warm black hair colors such as dark mocha, dark brown, cocoa color . are extremely suitable for those who are white, cool undertone or neutral undertone.

Hair dyed yellow

Cold yellow

Blonde hair color dyed with cold tones with shades such as platinum, silver, smoke, gray, ash, beige, white, champagne . is usually very suitable for those who have cool undertone, especially possessing porcelain white skin. The reason is that the perfect combination with cold tones will help you neutralize the redness of the skin while replenishing and enhancing your strengths.

Warm yellow

Hair dyed warm yellow tones such as gold gold, copper, caramel, amber, honey, strawberry gold . is considered to be able to bring better effects for those with smooth white skin with cool undertone. If you have light skin with warm undertone that you want to try, choose caramel blond for a more impressive look but remember to avoid overly blond tones.

Hair dyed red

Cold red

Red shades like pure red, reddish brown, reddish purple . can highlight bright skin very well so this dye is extremely suitable for cool undertone. In addition, cold red hair is also considered to be quite good for those with slightly warm or dark skin.

Warm red

Warm red hair with shades such as strawberry blond, copper, amber . is very suitable for those with neutral undertone skin tones. Light skin with yellow tones or pale, pale skin can also warm red hair because it will make the skin ruddy, healthier.

Choosing hair color according to skin tone is one of the ways to help you find it easy to find and to have a hairstyle that complements your strengths. Of course, personal preference or other factors are also important, but if you combine them in harmony, the result will be more perfect.

You finished reading the article "The secret to choosing dyed hair color that matches skin color" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.