

The series of funny photos that Google Maps has recorded across the world streets

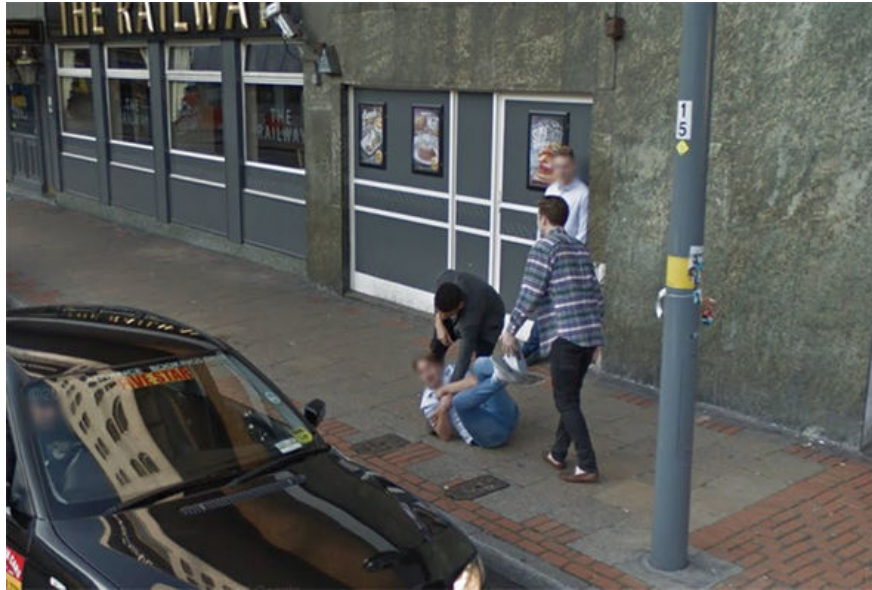

Not only does it help you navigate the road better, Google Maps also captures many difficult moments across the streets of the world.

Google Maps is one of the useful applications that make it easy to find the way, in addition to the Google Street View or Street View feature, which was launched in 2007, about 2 years after Google Maps was introduced. With Street View we will have the opportunity to admire the extremely interesting scenery throughout the cave, narrow lanes around the world, because this feature has the ability to "scan" 360-degree images everywhere. Through, through Google's cruise camera so just a few clicks away you can admire the scenery away from you halfway around the world.

In the times recorded on the streets, besides the beautiful scenery, Google Street View also many times . accidentally caught extremely humorous moments and "difficult" of many people. If you do not believe, here are some of the famous photos on Google Street View because of the mysterious and somewhat scary part it causes to viewers.

Specifically, the camera of Google Maps Street View caught sight of a man so drunk that he collapsed on the street in a downtown street of Birmingham. Meanwhile, two other people seem to be drinking friends trying to carry this guy back but can't.

However, when he noticed the appearance of the camera on the car coming from Google, he suddenly became unusually excited. Despite being drunk, he still tried to chase after the car on the road and ran, waving.

Party of doves
