Spotify is one of the most popular online music streaming apps today. With its huge library of music and podcasts, you can easily create playlists, add songs to your personal library, access and enjoy millions of songs without paying any fees, etc.

However, the biggest drawback is that free Spotify accounts include ads. Sometimes these intrusive ads can interrupt and ruin your music listening experience.

Here are some ways to block ads on Spotify that you can try and apply:

Method 1: Using a VPN

The advantage of this method is that it can be used to block ads on both the Spotify mobile app and the desktop app. The disadvantage is that it doesn't completely block ads.

By installing and using a VPN app, then selecting a country where Spotify distributes fewer ads, or a country that uses a different language than yours, you can experience listening to music on a platform with fewer annoying ads.

Method 2: Using a converter

Apps like TuneFab Spotify Music Converter allow users to convert, stream, and download songs from Spotify for offline listening. By default, offline listening means no ads.

Method 3: Change proxy settings on Mac

This method works similarly to a VPN. All you need to do is set up a proxy server in a country where Spotify hasn't launched yet.

However, this method takes more time, and proxy servers may be unstable; moreover, you might encounter connection problems when proxies are enabled.

Method 4: Subscribe to Spotify Premium

The simplest and most effective way to completely block ads on Spotify is to subscribe to Spotify Premium. Besides an ad-free listening experience, users also get access to a range of other premium features including: access to Spotify on all devices, downloading songs for offline listening, and unlimited access to a high-quality music library.

Avoid using ad blockers on Spotify.

One thing to keep in mind is that you should absolutely not use ad blockers on Spotify. This is because the streaming service's terms of service prohibit this. Furthermore, there are very few applications on the internet designed to block ads on Spotify.
