

The 'strength' score of the Huawei P70 series has been revealed

Huawei's upcoming P70 smartphone series reveals impressive performance scores.

Huawei's upcoming P70 smartphone series has appeared on the performance evaluation site Geekbench, revealing some information about new configurations and features.

Previously, there were many rumors saying the P70 series would be launched in April this year. Currently, three models believed to belong to the P70 series have appeared on Geekbench with model codes AL10, AL80 and AL00. In particular, the performance score of each type is as follows:

- Huawei P70 (AL10): achieved 1243 points in the single-core test and 3840 points in the multi-core test.
- Huawei P70 Pro (AL80): reached 1348 single-core points and 4114 multi-core points.
- Huawei P70 Art (AL00): scored significantly higher with 1784 single-core points and 4589 multi-core points.

It is worth noting that the P70 Art is said to use a new Kirin chipset with a different CPU structure compared to the P70 and P70 Pro. This chipset has 4 cores clocked at 2.02GHz, 3 cores clocked at 2.75GHz and the most powerful core clocked at 3.19GHz. P70 Art also has 12GB of RAM, higher than the P70 and P70 Pro.

In addition, all three P70 models also appeared on China's Radio certification website with features including that the P70 will support BeiDou satellite messaging, while the P70 Pro and P70 Art support both texting and Satellite calling through Tiantong 1.

Detailed information about the P70 series, including price and official launch date, has not yet been revealed by Huawei. However, the latest leaked information shows that the P70 will be a high-end smartphone line with many attractive features.

The launch of the P70 series also marks Huawei's return to the high-end smartphone segment. With impressive specifications, the P70 series promises to be a serious competitor in the smartphone market in the near future.
