

The three 'golden' philosophies of Jack Ma, every parent should read so they can be used to teach their children

If your child's dream can become extremely successful in whatever you choose to do in the future, here are three views from Jack Ma that parents can apply to teach their children to become successful people like this talented billionaire.

Speaking of Jack Ma, one of us knows that this is the second richest and richest billionaire in China. Not only that, he was the one who created the online trade brand giant Alibaba.

Besides being a billionaire, Jack Ma is a person who has a life and working style that is worth learning for us. Maybe Jack Ma's philosophy of life seems a bit strange and makes many people be surprised, but that is what is drawn from the reality of his own life that parents can Apply to teach your children to become successful people like this talented billionaire.

1. Learn how Jews teach children to communicate from a young age

1. A "poor child" does not mean there is no future

1. Why are "C" students the most successful people in the world?

There is one thing that billionaire Jack Ma always said in his lectures is that 'intelligence is not the only sign of success', and he is the living witness to his statement. because when he went to school he was considered a poor student.

Maybe many people will not believe, but in fact, from elementary school to university, Jack Ma has failed in exams. He had 'failed an important test at the elementary school twice, missed the high school test three times and failed the university entrance exam twice.' At the same time, Jack Ma was also Dai. Harvard declined 10 times!

" If you want to succeed, you have to have a great EQ (emotional index). No matter how smart you are, if you don't know how to work with others, you'll never succeed ." It is the secret of Jack Ma's success, though he is a poor learner.

2. Study does not necessarily mean studying at school

1. The secret to effective language learning from a 35-year-old man who speaks 11 languages

In addition to knowledge on the school, outside the society is also the place that gives us valuable knowledge. So does Jack Ma, his life not only absorbing knowledge at school, but he also has hotels with many foreigners to communicate and practice to improve his English.

The famous billionaire shared: ' Whether you want to study or work, the priority is always learning. When you do business, you learn from business. When you go to school, you have to put the learned knowledge into practice '.

3. 'Grit' may be the biggest factor behind success

Grit means being able to endure. In Vietnamese, it can be understood as 'Perseverance persistence'. Grit is attached to our future, our daily life, Grit does not stop for only a few weeks or months but it is all year long. And this term means that each of us is working hard today to be successful in the future. Grit is living like a life as a long distance race, not a sprint.

So, success does not come from day two, it needs a process to do it. On that path there will be times when you stumble, fail. But after that, you continue to stand up and make those plans.

Jack Ma once shared with his students: "If you think you need about 3 years to succeed, then be prepared for about 10 years. If you think you have about 5 years to succeed, please Prepare for about 15 years. You should have a long preparation and determination ".

And like many others, Jack Ma also has people, the character he admires so much is the fictional character Forrest Gump from the movie of the same name. He said that this is the character worth learning, because Gump is the character who dares to fight and work hard.

If you want your child to have a future like Jack Ma, stop believing that failure is a constant thing that can't be changed. Instead, show your child that each time he is denied is an opportunity to do better and start over.
