

The ultimate snake surgery of the tall bird is called the 'Taekwondo killer'.

A close-up of snake-eating kite birds uses their toenails to attack successively on their prey and re-eat the snake in just 1 minute.

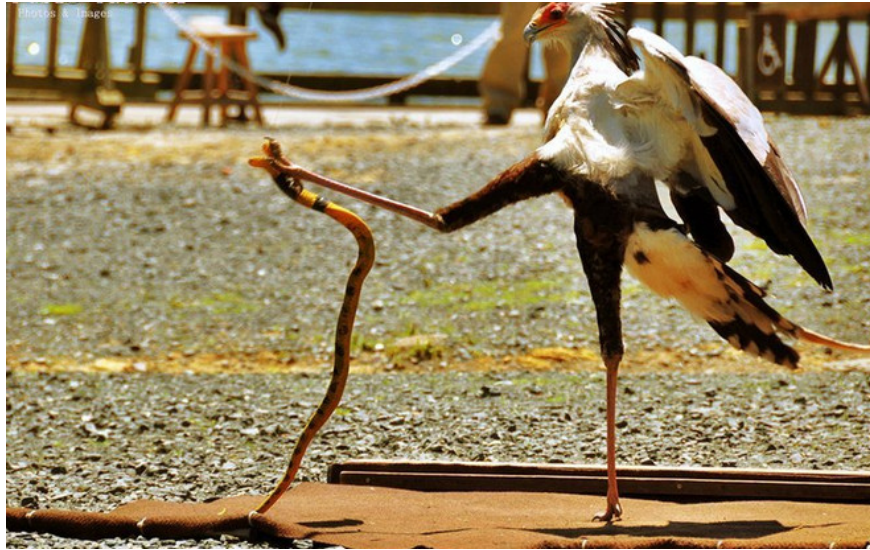

Secretary bird (Secretary bird) is a large bird of prey, living mainly on grasslands in Africa. They do not fly as high as other birds to hunt but roam the ground in search of food.

1. The flying owl catches the "lightning" prey of the world's fastest flying bird
2. The most unique dance of love in the natural world of extinct birds

Snake-eating kites have a very special appearance, their bodies resemble an eagle but possess high legs that reach up to nearly 1m cranes. The powerful combination between the eagle and the crane helped them both to spread their wings in the air at an altitude of 3,000 meters and to be able to resist the prey of the prey.

This bird possesses masterful hunting skills in the African steppe, long legs that help them run fast and can observe prey from above. When a prey is found, kite birds eat snakes to approach and launch continuous attack attacks with their legs that look like Taekwondo martial arts. After that, they used a beak to bury the dead prey.

With prey running too fast, snake-eating kites will both run and spread their wings so that the prey cannot escape.

Snake is a favorite dish of this bird, this is the cause they call them snake-eating kites. In addition, they eat small animals, insects, lizards, young birds, and even young Gazelle antelopes.

A close-up video of snake-eating kite birds using toenails to attack continuously on prey and re-snake feeding in just 1 minute below will show us their skill of hunting and predatory .

You finished reading the article "The ultimate snake surgery of the tall bird is called the 'Taekwondo killer'." edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.