

There is a Dark Mode for the Gmail application on Android

The Dark Mode that appeared on v2019.06.09 version of the Gmail for Android application was released yesterday.

The Dark Mode that appeared on v2019.06.09 version of the Gmail for Android application was released yesterday.

However, this interface is still in the process of being completed so Google has only deployed to a limited number of users.

Specifically, some details on the Dark Mode interface in Gmail are displayed in black on a gray background, so it is difficult to see. Meanwhile, the details and themes in the main menu use brighter colors, making them easier to see.

Currently, the application does not yet have a switch button to turn on and off the Dark Mode interface.

8:53

88%

Default notification action
Delete

Manage notifications

Conversation view
Group emails in the same conversation together for IMAP, POP3, and Exchange accounts

Conversation list density
Default

Swipe actions
Configure swipe actions to quickly act on emails in the conversation list

Default reply action
Choose your default reply action

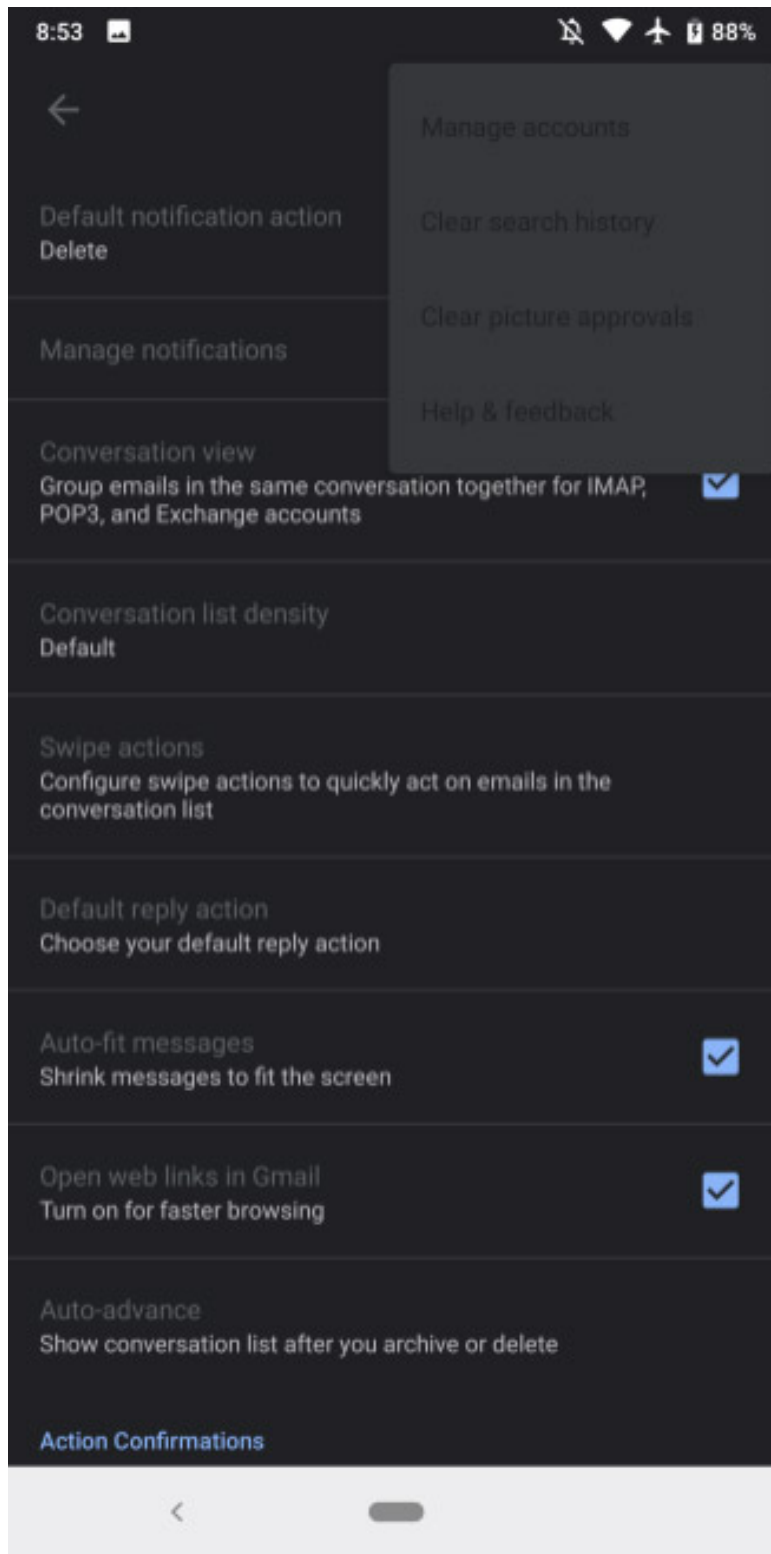

Auto-fit messages
Shrink messages to fit the screen

Open web links in Gmail
Turn on for faster browsing

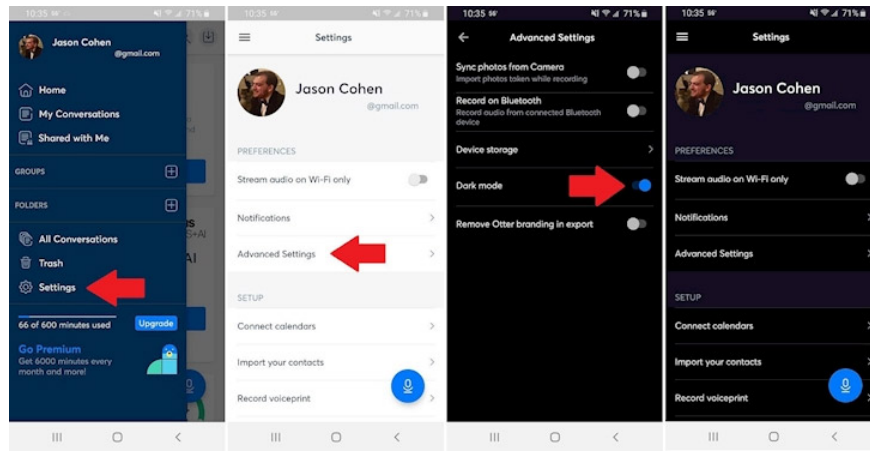

Auto-advance
Show conversation list after you archive or delete

Action Confirmations

If you have been updated to this latest version, turn on Dark Mode according to the instructions in the picture below and experience, otherwise, don't be too impatient, this feature will soon be deployed by Google. all users only.

Note that this Dark Mode interface is still incomplete and has not been applied to the main mailboxes.

Before Gmail, Google brought Dark Mode to some of its other apps including Google's App, Drive and Keep.

You finished reading the article "There is a Dark Mode for the Gmail application on Android" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.