

These are the reasons why you can't enjoy your boss

On a beautiful day, when you wake up and you feel depressed, you don't want to work anymore. You feel disgusted with your work. No problem, this is nothing wrong. The simple reason may be that you hate the company, hate your colleagues or maybe you hate your boss.

On a beautiful day, when you wake up and you feel depressed, you don't want to work anymore. You feel disgusted with your work. No problem, this is nothing wrong. The simple reason may be that you hate the company, hate your colleagues or maybe you hate your boss.

Now in your mind, you just want to give up your job. It is a matter of course, not only you but also anyone in your situation thinks like you.

In your mind, you will think:

1. Working with my boss is really crazy.
1. Work with crazy colleagues.
1. You do your job very well.
1. You can work independently.
1. You think you should open a small company.

Disgusting for work is one of the top reasons and this reason is also the motivation for you to give up your job. However, remember that when you open a small company, you are the boss, you are satisfied with your dreams, think about how you will be if you fail.

Then when you start over, you go for a job but no boss wants to accept you. Or suppose, if you're looking for another job, it's not exactly your favorite job. Then you will feel the difficulties.

Remember that your boss is not someone else, that person is you. Work harder to overcome any difficulties and feel your work more and more meaningful.

Business is not as simple as you think. Always the same, the time when starting a business is also the most difficult time.

When you embark on building a company, it also means that you build a world full of stress and difficulty, you always want to explode.

According to statistics, among all small and medium-sized companies, up to 80% of companies must close after the first 18 months. 90% of newly established companies failed, abandoned or forced to close.

The advice to you is that if you intend to set up a small-scale company, find yourself a good and good reason. You can start a company if you really believe in your product or service and you're ready to turn your beliefs into real action.

The reason for you to start a company is because you want to fight. Fight with competitors, with annoying customers and to fight with the bad thoughts that are present in your thoughts.

You can start a company because you have the skills and resources, both technically and strategically.
