

Things were killed by iPhone in the past 7 years

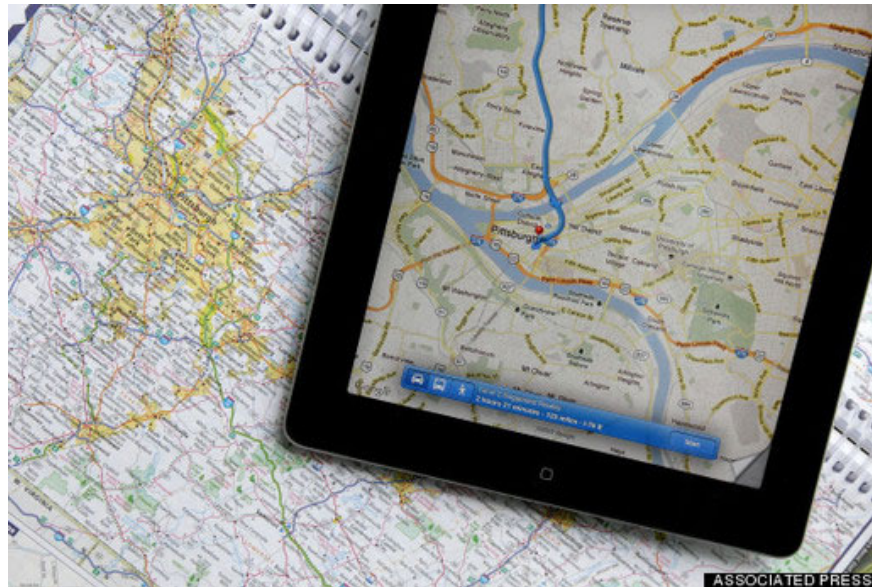

On January 9, 2007, Apple CEO Steve Jobs introduced the first generation iPhone. 7 years later today, many things have changed, especially, many products and services have been killed by iPhone.

On January 9, 2007, Apple CEO Steve Jobs introduced the first generation iPhone. 7 years later today, many things have changed, especially, many products and services have been killed by iPhone.

Jobs was only modest at the time saying he wanted to win 1% of the global mobile phone market share. But today, Apple has 12.9% market share and more importantly, the iPhone has helped revolutionize the entire market.

After 7 years since its launch, the iPhone has constantly improved and added many features to become one of the best mobile phones on the planet. In other words, the iPhone contributes to death or many other products and services have to struggle.

Thanks to Google Maps on the iPhone, we no longer have to go around with the map on our hands when coming to strange places.

iPhone also has the left side when making the atmosphere of family meal or friends meeting become boring and discrete when everyone plugs into their phone.

7 years ago, BlackBerry was a pioneer in the smartphone market but ' thanks to ' iPhone, this brand gradually became weak and alien to users.

Every morning, the one who wakes you up is not the watch anymore but the iPhone.

Travel cameras share the same fate with BlackBerry in terms of convenience, size, speed, price are not superior to the iPhone.

After more than 3 years, iPod music sales began to decline when Apple users opted for more iPhone and iPad.

Today, owning a smartphone like the iPhone makes us lose focus on what's going on in reality when new notifications from Facebook, Gmail, Twitter . constantly appear on the screen. Worse, many people become confused and dependent too much on the device but forget about the presence of those around them.

The appearance of the iPhone has changed lives, you can look at the video below:

You finished reading the article "Things were killed by iPhone in the past 7 years" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.